Dearly beloved, WHAT an election!

This nation of considerable size and power turning toward the Roosevelt residence, Hyde Park or the White House, exclaims with Longfellow:

"Thine was the prophet's vision, thine
The exaltation, the divine
Insanity of noble minds,
That never falters nor abates,
But labors and endures and waits,
Till all that it foresees it finds
Or what it can not find creates."

Politically speaking, water runs uphill. Pennsylvania goes Democratic, and Postmaster-General Farley, who worked for it and predicted it, proves again that he knows politics.

Pennsylvania has been the Republican fortress for sixty years. On election after election, Democrats have read above the door to the polls, "Leave hope behind, all ye (Democrats) that enter here."

Woodrow Wilson could not capture that fortress with the big war to help.

But Franklin D. Roosevelt with the big depression war has captured Pennsylvania and now becomes "Roosevelt the Great."

The Democratic landslide was a Franklin D. Roosevelt landslide. People voted "for Roosevelt" or "against Roosevelt," and the old ballad writer's "child that is unborn" might have guessed what would happen.

This election is far more important than the election of 1932. It is such a tribute to Franklin D. Roosevelt as no man has ever received from a great nation in time of peace.

In 1932, F. D. Roosevelt was elected to try any experiment he chose. He has tried the experiments for two years, and a gigantic vote shouts approval.

For another man than President Roosevelt such overwhelming applause, encouragement and vindication might be dangerous.

A great nation's invitation, "Here we are, do with us as you please," might, for some other man than Roosevelt, offer a tempting door to dictatorship and Fascism.

It was a feeble demonstration, in comparison, that changed the second Napoleon from president of the French Republic to Emperor of the French nation.

The dictator's door seems to be wide open, but President Roosevelt, who knows the American people, will present to this nation no "man on horseback."

He knows that the highest peak is the most dangerous spot in a mountain range.

His ideas and beliefs date back a long way in his United States' ancestry, to the men that built this country on the theory that men should govern themselves.

Anybody offering him the sword of a Boulanger or the castor oil bottle of a Mussolini would hear a polite, "Much obliged, but no, thanks!"

Upton Sinclair and his "End Poverty in California" have been rejected by California voters. Perhaps Sinclair, well meaning and sincere, is not much disappointed now. Three days hence he may be glad. The cold necessity of making good difficult promises disappears from his horizon. He need not give a life pension of fifty dollars a month to everybody over fifty years of age, or face the problem of making profitable farms and factories that former owners could not keep running.

Kipling's Butterfly that frightened his wife with threats to stamp his foot and bring a giant magician that would lift the caterpillar's garden high in the air was terribly embarrassed when his wife said, "go on, stamp your foot, let's see your magician."

Mr. Sinclair, though well meaning, might have been embarrassed had California said, "go on, let's see you end poverty in California."

In his first surprise and disappointment, Mr. Sinclair predicts "public discontent amounting to fury," and promises to have the elected governor, Merriam recalled by popular vote, predicting for California a deficit of more than $100,000,000 next year.

Mr. Sinclair says "the reactionaries will be chiefly con-

Four From Malden Injured in Auto Crash

SIX OTHERS ARE HURT IN CHARLTON COLLISION

Four Malden persons were among a group of 10 who suffered serious injuries in a head-on automobile crash in Charlton late this afternoon.

The injured from Malden were Albert Burkhard, 30, and his wife, Evelyn, 25, both of Ellis street, and Joseph Lavole and Alphonse De Van, 20, also of Ellis street.

The others injured were Howard Gero, 42, Betty Kerr, 20, Helen Randolph, 21, and Rose and Muriel Gero, all of Springfield, and Rosalie Gero, of Haverhill.

All of the victims were rushed to hospitals in Worcester and Southbridge in passing automobiles commandeered by state troopers.

The most seriously injured were Howard Gero and Albert and Evelyn Burkhard and Muriel Gero. All are suffering from internal injuries.

FORD FRICK N. L. PRESIDENT

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 8—Ford C. Frick, former New York newspaperman and radio commentator on sports, was today unanimously elected president of the National League, succeeding John A. Heydler, resigned.

Frick was chosen for the post at a meeting of the club owners in the league offices here, the magnates having been called together to select Heydler's successor when the latter announced recently that he was stepping down on December 11 because of ill health.

Heydler, in retiring, was signally honored by the creation of a new post which he will occupy for life—Chairman of the board of directors. Harvey Traband, Heydler's secretary, was simultaneously promoted, being made secretary-treasurer of the league, at a considerable advance in salary.

The salaries of today's appointees were not disclosed, the announcement merely saying that Frick and Traband had been appointed for a period of one year, beginning December 11, and that Heydler would hold office for life. There

Curley Hints He Will Run for Senator

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Governor-elect James M. Curley made one thing plain today in his first press conference since his great victory at the polls.

He has no intention of accepting Governor Ely's proffer of advice and assistance.

And the Governor-elect hinted very broadly at another thing. He gave the reporters the definite impression he would run for U. S. Senator in 1936.

He very definitely spurned the offer of advice extended by Governor Ely on an olive branch, token of peace after a bitter campaign enmity.

CITES SECRET PAMPHLET

Then he was asked:

"How about 1936?"

Recognizing that the senatorship now held by Marcus Coolidge, Democrat, of Fitchburg, was meant, he replied:

"The task before me now is to make good on the job I'm going into, the governorship.

"Membership in the United States Senate I have always considered the nation's biggest job. I never wanted to be Governor but was forced into it to fight an enemy of President Roosevelt.

"There is no doubt that Mr. Bacon's election would have been assured if I had not gone in. This opinion is confirmed by a Republican campaign pamphlet which was all prepared, but withheld after the Republicans found themselves opposing me instead of somebody else. It contained attacks on the Governor."

GRANT SECRETARY

The former mayor said that any attempt to balk the ouster of Police Commissioner Eugene C. Hultman would be "rather poor taste" on the part of Governor Ely.

On the matter of his own appointments, the Governor-elect maintained a strict silence except when he was asked who his secretary would be. He then spoke about the radio comments of Dick Grant on politics, and added:

"I shall probably tender the Chicago, Nov. 8—Senator William E. Borah of Idaho called for a reorganization of the Republican party today and prophesied its death if reorganization were not achieved. With a backward glance at Tuesday's election, the Idaho Republican leader said he was not surprised at the results. He added:

"People were asked to stop a program without any substitute being offered."

WHITE HOUSE TO SERVE WINES

Washington, Nov. 8—The White House will serve light wines at state dinners this season, the first time since pre-prohibition days.

It must be light wine and American wine, in accordance with Mrs. Roosevelt's pronouncement on that subject, when wine first became legal.

No more than two wine glasses will be at each plate at any dinner.

In making this statement to her press conference today, Mrs. Roosevelt said of the serving of wines:

"With us it will be a very simple thing always, serving American wines to those who care for them."

Asked if she, being a tee-totaler, would turn down the wine glasses at her plate, as Mrs. Grover Cleveland did, Mrs. Roosevelt said she didn't see why one had to turn down the glass, even if one didn't drink wine.

PRIESTS FLEE RECTORY FIRE

A woman housekeeper was rescued over a ladder and priests were forced to flee today, when fire broke out in the rectory of Our Lady of Presentation church, Washington street, Brighton.

The housekeeper, Mrs. Henrietta Veal, was trapped on the third floor, when firemen of Engine 51 arrived. Captain John Redmond and Firemen Henry Walsh, John Beard and William Fallon raised a ladder to the window and carried Mrs. Veal to the street.

The blaze was discovered in the basement by the Rev. James Murphy, pastor. It started near a heater. In addition to Father Murphy, Father Donovan and Father Gibbons, assistants, were forced to leave the rectory.

W. R. Hearst Gives His Views on the Election

To the Editor of the Boston Evening American:

The election clearly shows that the New Deal is considered comprehensively by the people and endorsed with exceptional enthusiasm.

Some obvious and perhaps rather serious errors are overlooked and disregarded by the voters because of the sincerity of purpose of the administration and because of the generally beneficial results which have been obtained.

The voters again overwhelmingly repudiate the Republican stand-pat do-nothing policy and approve Mr. Roosevelt's active and aggressive policy of trying everything which may restore prosperity and discarding whatever does not prove successful.

Still it is plain from the result in California that the Democratic Party may become too radical to be successful, and that the Republican Party may win, even in the face of a general Democratic landslide, when the Republican Party adopts a soundly progressive policy, and the Democratic Party goes to extremes of radicalism which the public will not endorse.

The lesson of the election should be, therefore, that continued progressivism is demanded by the public, but SOUND progressivism.

This principle applied to the national administration requires that the policies which are not conducive to recovery be promptly abandoned, and that the wise policy of the administration recently adopted of encouraging business, and taking up the slack of unemployment through business revival, be continued and expanded.

Furthermore, the national administration must come to realize that an unbalanced budget and excessive and unreasonable expenditures cannot be continued forever.

The national government should expend its energies in an endeavor to create a speedy return to normalcy—normalcy of business activities, normalcy of employment, normalcy of government cost, and normalcy of government expenditure.

The administration has received an inspiring vote of confidence. It should be inspired to deserve it, not merely by good intentions, but by practical results.

If the excessive expenditure continues and practical results are not attained, the situation will create either a more judicious progressivism provided by an opposition party or else an era of communistic protest which may threaten our American institutions.

New Deal Test Seen in Democratic Win

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 8—Secure in their control of the federal government as no party has been since reconstruction days, Democratic leaders began to lay plans today for the convening of the 74th Congress early in January.

In that Congress, as a result of the amazing Democratic sweep of Tuesday, they will completely dominate both Senate and House. They will have either 69 or 7 seats in the Senate out of 96, and 318 to 320 members of the 435 house out of 435

VANISHED TWO YEARS AGO IN PROVIDENCE

By JAMES F. McENANEY

Foxboro, Nov. 8—Bones and clothing in New England's first sack gang murder were tentatively identified here today as those of Vincent "Legs" Carella, 32, of Providence, sought for 2½ years as the victim of a gang war.

The dismembered body, flesh eaten away by lime, lay in a lonely section called Lovers' Lane since May, 1932, and would probably have crumbled to ashes had not two Norwood high school boys stumbled across it Tuesday.

Today's sudden identification was announced by Police Chief Joseph P. Dean, after he had agreed to a conference in Dedham with State Detective Michael Fleming and District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing of Norfolk County.

Chief Dean said the identification was clinched in a telephone call to Providence police, who started a search for Carella after his abandoned car was found in the woods of North Attleboro on May 19, 1932.

Carella had then been missing two days.

Carella was believed to have been the victim of a Worcester liquor mob, which lost 200 cases of liquor and a truck in a hijacking a month before. Two years before that Carella had been mysteriously shot in the leg.

Two promising clues to the identification of the murderer or murderers were in the hands of au-

TWO SOUGHT IN ROBLES KIDNAP

By International News Service

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 8—With Oscar Robson, 31, Tucson, Ariz., night club operator under arrest, U. S. Department of Justice agents here today concentrated on the apprehension of two other persons, whom they assert were Robson's accomplices in the kidnaping of June Robles in Tucson last spring.

It was learned today that from the amazing web of evidence gathered by the investigators, it has been established that a fourth member of the kidnap gang committed suicide last May, shortly after June was discovered alive in her desert coffin prison.

Joseph E. P. Dunn, head of the Los Angeles district of the Department of Justice, who conducted the investigations which led to the arrest of Robson, today emphatically declared that Robson will be prosecuted in the federal courts, and not turned over to Arizona authorities.

The printing on the ransom notes received by the Robles family at the time of the kidnaping, the federal agents here said, has been found by experts of the Department of Justice in Washington, to be similar to Robson's handwriting.

GREEK GOD, B'WAY PLAYBOY SHARE GLORIA SPOTLIGHT

MRS. WHITNEY IS 'UNFIT,' SAYS GIRL'S MOTHER

By Universal Service.

New York, Nov. 8—A Greek god and a Broadway playboy shared the spotlight in resumption of the Vanderbilt-Whitney-Morgan court battle over custody of little Gloria Vanderbilt, the four-million-dollar baby.

One was Hercules, the strong-arm man of Greek mythology. The other was A. C. Blumenthal, one-time pal of former Mayor James J. Walker.

As Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt took the stand for a bitter session of continued cross-examination by Herbert C. Smyth, attorney for Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Nathan Burkan, Mrs. Vanderbilt's lawyer, introduced a number of photographs of statuary and paintings from the Whitney museum of art, by which he sought to prove wealthy Mrs. Whitney unfit for the guardianship of little Gloria.

HELD DANGEROUS

The bone of contention was a statue of Hercules, which Burkan held was dangerous to the morals of the public in general, and little Gloria in particular.

Smyth countered with similar photographs from the Metropolitan Museum, and the courtroom of Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew became for a time a lecture hall on ancient and modern art.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, who rose from a sickbed to come to court, was pale but determined as she faced the long cross-examination of Smyth, and when she was questioned about her friendship with dapper Mr. Blumenthal, lifted her voice in spirited denials of any romantic entanglement, and pounded the Judge's desk with her small gloved fist.

Newspaper clippings and photographs were introduced by Smyth, showing Mrs. Vanderbilt and Blumenthal together at a party at the latter's home, mentioned in testimony during the early weeks of the case.

Angered by the charges of Mrs. Whitney's attorney, Mrs. Vanderbilt's black eyes flashed as she shouted her denials at the equally excited Smyth. At one point Mrs. Vanderbilt cautioned Smyth:

"You'll break your ring if you don't stop pounding on the table."

A ripple of mirth relieved the strained solemnity of the court room.

PUBLIC BARRED

The press and public were as usual barred from the proceedings, but so spirited was the exchange between Mrs. Vanderbilt and Smyth that their words at times could be heard in the corridor.

Other works of art from the Whitney Museum, which Burkan presented as objectionable, included an etching showing a man and woman in close embrace on a rooftop, and a mural depicting nude gentlemen in top-hats playing leapfrog.

It is believed now that a decision in the case will not be reached until late in the week, as Smyth will continue his cross-examination of Mrs. Vanderbilt tomorrow.

Dangerous Art for Little Gloria?

This, may it please the court, is Hercules. Maybe not the same Hercules whose picture Attorney Nathan Burkan produced at the Gloria Vanderbilt custody fight. Burkan's exhibit was in the classic altogether, as against this one being in running pants. Burkan argued that Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney couldn't be a first-class aunt and guardian with a moral corrupter like Hercules around the house.

Vanderbil Lawyers Scan Photographs

MRS. GLORIA VANDERBILT ALFRED C. BLUMENTHAL

And here's a piece of evidence unearthed by the Whiteys. Their attorney got Mrs. Vanderbilt annoyed no end by waving a copy of th is photograph and asking her about a romantic entanglement with Jimmy Walker's pal Blumenthal. This chummy picture was taken at a dinner in the Blumenthal home. Mrs. Vanderbilt's host may have been in a romantic mood, but he just looks as if his meal didn't agree with him. This was a very private affair. Only a few newspaper photographers and a flock of guests and servants were around.

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY

They didn't bring this one into court, but they could have, Mrs. Whitney in her artistic smock and deep-night turban is off for a day of adventure sculpturing a few "moral corrupters" of her own. Attorney Burkan was so uncomplimentary as to call some of the Whitney works of art objectionable. But he was referring mostly to things like a mural with nude males in top hats playing leapfrog, he said. (Pictures from International News Photograph Service.)

Doumergue Ousted; Flandin Is Premier

By Associated Press

Paris, Nov. 8—French politics tossed Premier Gaston Doumerge into the discard today, and Doumerge's minister of public works, Etienne Flandin, agreed to form a new French government and serve as premier.

He accepted this task at the request of President Lebrun, who previously had offered the premiership to the chief naitnal in French politics, Pierre Laval, the assigned foreign minister. Laval refused the task.

The French public, fearful of a repetition of the riots which brought the Doumergue government into being, watched the rapid succession of events with seriousness.

Doumergue had based his rule on the idea of a "political truce" and Lebrun had called upon Laval in an effort to salvage that type of government. But the refusal of Laval, the avowed enemy of payment of the French war debt to the United States, was regarded as irrevocable.

Doumergue's resignation, forced as it was by the refusal of Edouard Herriot, minister without portfolio and leader of the radical Socialists, an five other ministers affiliated with him to co-operate, left the veteran statesman disillusioned and disheartened.

He immediately issued a brief appeal to the people in an effort to preserve the peace of the country.

Doumergue refused to continue with the cabinet, which came into power with him during the bloodshed of last February, because he felt it would furnish an excuse for the establishment of a dictatorship, since his cabinet, lacking Herriot and his friends, would represent a parliamentary minority.

The retiring premier, who also once was president of France, blamed the radical Socialists for the rupture of the political truce.

In addition Doumergue bitterly arraigned the radical Socialists, of whose party he was once a member, as responsible for "the February riots and the death of unarmed war veterans."

Immediately following the resignation of the Doumergue ministry, President Lebrun, according to French tradition, summoned Jules Jeanneney, former under-secretary for war, and Fernand Emile Bouisson, president of the Chamber of Deputies, to Elysee Palace to offer Bouisson the premiership as a matter of politeness. Bouisson declined.

Postponement of Saar Vote to Aid Hitler

(Copyright, 1934, by International News Service)

Berlin, Nov. 8—Reichsleader Adolf Hitler is ready to capture the Saar territory peacefully and legally for Germany, despite any dilatory maneuvers on the part of France to delay the plebiscite scheduled for next January.

Der Fuehrer and his chief advisers, International News Service learned today, have been spending long hours recently going over every possible situation likely to arise in the Saar, including the plebiste postponement possibility, reported strong in some dispatches from Paris.

CCC RIOT ONLY 'SLIGHT ERROR'

By International News Service

Baltimore, Nov. 8—The "riot" of a Civilian Conservation Corps company from Worcester, Mass., Monday night on a special train carrying the company to winter headquarters in the South, was a "slight disturbance caused by three men who had been drinking," the Third Corps Area headquarters reported today.

Maj. Walter A. Walker, assistant to the corps area inspector general, reported ex-service men in the company took no part in the general disturbance.

RICKENBACKER HOPS OFF

Burbank, Calif., Nov. 8—Seeking a new transcontinental speed record both for transport and speed planes, a huge transport plane with Captain Eddie Rickenbacker in charge, took off from the Union Air Terminal for New York at 5:42 a. m. (P. S. T.) today.

An official timer of the National Aeronautical association was present. One stop was planned on the flight, in Chicago where the plane will be refueled.

Besides Rickenbacker, the plane carried two pilots and three passengers.

Ideal weather conditions were reported along the "Great Circle" route, over which the craft will fly at an altitude of 18,000 feet, to take advantage of prevailing winds.

Couple Die in Flames Trying to Save Son

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 8—A young father and mother perished here today in flames while vainly attempting to rescue their 10-year-old son asleep in his bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis O. Setzer were playing bridge at the home of Mr. Setzer's father nearby, when their seven-year-old son, Bernhardt, burst into the room and told them their house was on fire.

The husband and wife frantically hurried home and dashed into the flames.

They failed to come out alive. Firemen and police found the body of Mrs. Setzer with that of her boy, Henry, in a hallway on the second floor. The father's body was found near the landing on the first floor. Setzer was 38 and his wife, 36.

A passing motorist, Philo Shelton, who noticed smoke and flames coming from the Setzer home, while Bernhardt was running to warn his parents, called the fire department.

Two firemen are recovering in a local hospital today from smoke and injuries. They are John Lezinski and James Hogarth.

Bernhardt Setzer, father of the dead man, is a member of Algonquin, Brooklawn, and Bridgeport Yacht clubs. His son is said to have been a New York Advertising man.

MOTHER GAY IN GLORIA FIGHT

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 8—Mrs. Gloria Morgan anderbilt, gaining in confidence and courage, went jauntily through another courtroom ordeal of barbed debate with hostile attorneys today in the fight for her heiress daughter Gloria, and face cross-examination by Herbert C. Smyth with her chin up.

On her way to the courtroom at the start of the day's session she received a spiritual "lift" from a courtroom elevator man, who approached with extended hand and said:

"I wish you the same luck as the Democratic party—a clean sweep, Mrs. Vanderbilt."

The Vanderbilt widow found tonic in the cordial words and patted the elevator man's hand while she smiled at her sister, Lady Furness and Mrs. Thaw, who accompanied her.

FATHER KENNEY DROPS DEAD

The Reverend Francis J. Kenney, 60, church pastor of St. Augustine's Church, South Boston, died this morning in the rectory following a heart attack.

In apparent good health when he retired last night Father Kenney was taken ill early this morning.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed.

Father Kenney was born in Medway, 60 years ago. He was ordained into the priesthood December, 1893, by the late Archbishop Williams. Through his work at both St. Augustine's and St. Monica's he made himself greatly beloved to the people of South Boston. Previous to his elevation to the pastorate of St. Monica church he was a curate in Chelmford.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Catherine Kenney of Medway and three sisters.

Vienna, Nov. 8 (INS)—Johann Reck, commanding officer of the Heimwehr Railway Battalion, was shot twice today at the Western station by unidentified assailants.

Police rounded up a large number of suspects, most of them Communists.

Former Bostonian Dies

River Denys, N. S., Nov. 8 (AP)—Gustave J. Heuser, 65, was dead here today of a heart attack. Born in Boston, he came to Nova Scotia 30 years ago and settled here. He is survived by his wife, two sons, Louis Heuser of Providence, R. I., and Hugh Heuser of Charlotte, N. C., and six daughters.

Hanson Orders Autopsy On Aged Hatchet Victim

Hanson, Nov. 8—Dr. eGorge Burgess Magrath Suffolk county medical examiner, was today called to assist in the autopsy to be performed on the body of Charles T. Baker, 68, which will determine whether the ranson poultry dealer was murdered or committed suicide.

Baker was found after an all-day search, lying face down in a thicket in the rear of his Washington street home, dead of a hatchet wound in the base of his skull.

Police said the wound was so placed on the right-hand side of the neck that it would have been almost impossible for Baker, who was right-handed, to have inflicted it upon himself.

A blood-stained hatchet, Baker's property, was found about 35 feet from the body. His hat and a clean paring knife were discovered close by.

After he was reported missing early Wednesday morning, a wide search was instituted by local and state police. Patrolman Fred Brown of Hanson and Robert Walker, a neighbor, were the first to find the body.

Baker, who ran a large poultry farm here, was said to have had no financial difficulties. He family said that although he had been ill for the last two weeks, he was not despondent.

Baker's wife, Mrs. Ruth W. Baker, and a son, Howard W. Baker, survive.

'Hit-Dog-Run' Driver Fined

The right of a dog to cross the street in safety was recognized in Quincy court today when George Kinman, 58, of Everton street, Dorchester, was found guilty of leaving the scene of an accident after causing injury to a dog and was fined $20.

Fred Hart, 12, Franklin street, Braintree, owner of the dog, and Edgar Lindsay, president of the Brockton board of aldermen, who witnessed the accident, testified in the first hit-a-pup-and-run case in Quincy.

Lindsay told the court he gave chase and insisted that Kinman be haled into court because three dogs he owned had been victims of hit-and-run drivers.

BRUNO THREAT NOTE PROBED

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 8—A threatening letter written a year ago to Manfried, infant son of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, was to be examined today by Hauptmann's defense attorneys, not as an absurdity but as a clue which might lead them to a bitter enemy of the alleged Lindbergh kidnaper.

The letter, written on stationery of a mid-town hotel, was in German and was addressed to the month-old baby as Manfried Von Hauptmann at the Hauptmann Bronx home. Only Isidor Fisch, the man who Hauptmann says gave him the $14,000 ransom money found in his garage, knew the name of the baby at the time, according to Edward J. Reilly and Lloyd C. Fisher, defense counsel.

The letter vilified the infant in many ways and called him a "criminal." The attorneys believe it the work of an enemy of the child's father who wished to get him in trouble.

thorities today as a result of the gruesome find on Tuesday.

One was a flattened bullet, given for examination to Captain Charles J. Van Amburgh, state ballistics expert. The other was a peculiarly-knotted rope that was used to tie up the body.

Detectives believe also that remnants of the burlap sack might prove of material aid in running down the murderers and that even the lime—through which the crime was to have been covered—may be the means of trapping the killers.

The rope was knotted by one adept in seamanship. Several knots of the same peculiar type were found and held intact.

WAS "PUBLIC ENEMY"

Although Carella was listed on the Providence list of "public enemies" and had been rounded up for questioning shortly before his disappearance, police in that city today said they have only one police record against him. He served four months in 1918 for larceny of an auto, they said.

Authorities, immediately after today's identification, set out on the trail of the Worcester hijack victims. All members of it were to be rounded up for questioning, they said.

Police Strikers Clash; 11 Injured

East Rutherford, N. J., Nov. 8 (AP)—Police clashed today with a crowd of about 500 striking silk and rayon dye workers when the strikers attempted to halt men from going to work in the Standard Bleaching and Printing Company plant on Carlton Hill. One policeman and ten strikers were injured.

Strike leaders asserted that the Standard plant, which ordinarily handles only cotton goods, was processing silk and rayon for manufacturers whose plants in the Passaic Valley area have been closed by the strike of 20,000 dye workers.

Strenuous Love Life of Gloria

FARMER WON'T DO FOR HER

STAR TELLS ALL TO JUDGE; WINS A DIVORCE

Los Angeles, Nov. 8—Like many another married couple, Gloria Swanson and her fifth husband, Michael Farmer, frequently argued far, far into the night.

This fact and a number of other intimate details of her domestic life were revealed by the actress here when she obtained a divorce in Superior court.

Dressed from head to feet in brown, the shade of her hair, Miss Swanson presented a perfect picture of what the well-dressed divorcee is wearing.

She told the court of the frequent quarrels which marred her marital life and, she said, interfered with her career. She said:

"Once in London he was cast as my leading man in a British picture. There were some changes made and finally he was offered a smaller part which hurt his pride and he wanted to withdraw. He quarreled so much about it I was ill and had to take 10 days off to recover."

On another occasion, she testified, Farmer became angry when she received a telegram of congratulation upon the birth of her daughter, Michelle Bridgit. Although she had met the man who sent the telegram but once, her husband created such a scene the nurses had to put him out of the room, she said.

Miss Swanson was nervous at first as she testified. Her uneasiness vanished in smiles when the decree was ordered.

Lois Wilson, movie actress friend of Miss Swanson, testified Farmer was particularly inclined to be abusive at the mention of American politics.

"We were all at the home of a mutual friend to hear one of President Roosevelt's speeches," Miss Wilson related. "When we commenced to seriously discuss the President's talk, Mr. Farmer broke in with a long string of abuse against Miss Swanson, telling her she didn't know anything about politics and that she wasn't good at anything else."

Miss Swanson was awarded custody of her two-year-old daughter, Michelle. She said Farmer had agreed to pay for the child's support, but she understood he was $1000 behind in payment of the baby's nurse's wages.

Farmer, who was said to be in Europe at present, did not contest the case.

McADOO Girl 'Not AT HOME'

BUT CAN MARRY SO DAD SAYS

'OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW,' HE DECLARES

Los Angeles, Nov. 8—Ellen Wilson McAdoo has her parents' consent today to marry Rafael Lopez De-Onate, Manila-born film actor.

But what marriage plans the grand-daughter of the late President Wilson had, remained in doubt as both she and De Onate were reported "not at home."

Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo, who divorced McAdoo three months ago, was servants at her home reported, unwilling to make a statement. Miss McAdoo was reported "not at home."

De Onate's roommate, Juan Torena, said:

"Rafael isn't at home and I don't know when he will return. But I don't believe he has heard the good news."

Acquiescence of her father, Senator William Gibbs McAdoo, to the romance of 19-year-old Ellen and De Onate, who is twice her age, reversed his earlier vigorous opposition, expressed after the couple filed a notice of intention to wed at Riverside two weeks ago.

"Neither I nor Mrs. McAdoo, who gives me authority to speak for her," he said, "will interpose any objection to the marriage of our daughter, Ellen, to Mr. De Onate. She is 19 years of age and capable of choosing her own husband. The time of the marriage is for Ellen to determine."

Earlier it was announced that if Ellen married De Onate her $1000 monthly allowance would be terminated. The actor's income had been estimated by McAdoo's law partner and friend, William H. Neblett, at less than $1000 yearly, whereas Miss McAdoo's maintenance, said the McAdoo law partner, cost her father $10,000 a year.

In the face of her father's stern objections to the marriage and the Neblett'a demand De Onate be forced to prove he was not of Filipino blood—the California statute forbids marriages between Caucasians and Filipinos—Miss McAdoo and her fiance did not return to Riverside to apply for the marriage license.

However, De Onate has maintained stoutly that he is purely of Spanish decent.

Dallin to See Statue 'Live'

Cyrus E. Dallin, of Arlington, noted American sculptor, will tonight have the unusual experience of seeing one of his statues come to life.

The "Appeal to the Great Spirit," the historic bronze which for years has graced the grounds of the Boston Art Museum, will be depicted in a living tableau at the Rodeo in the Boston Garden with Dallin as the distinguished guest.

Hardy Murphy will portray the Indian, astride his wonder horse "Buck." As a dramatic interlude between the thrilling contests, rider and steed will take the spotlight in a living interpretation of the "Appeal to the Great Spirit."

Romance!

New York, Nov. 8—Nathan H. Duering, 33, of Brookfield, Mass., and Marion L. Sanborn, also 33, of New York, obtained a marriage license here.

Patricia Ann, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Wimble, survived operations for the removal of her appendix and the righting of misplaced abdominal organs. She was put on the operating table 20 minutes after her birth.

NOBEL WIN

To Sicilian

By International News Service

Stockholm, Nov. 8—The Nobel prize for literature was awarded today to Luigi Pirandello, noted Sicilian dramatist and novelist.

He is best known to the United States for his plays, which include "Six Characters in Search of An Author" and "As You Desire Me."

Pirandello's selection caused something of a surprise. Three Americans had been mentioned as likely recipients, Eugene O'Neill, dramatist; Paul Elmer More, essayist, and Willa Cather, novelist.

IDOLS OF FRENCH STAGE BOTH WIN DIVORCES

Paris, Nov. 8—A marriage that linked two glittering figures of the French theater—Yvonne Printemps and Sacha Guitry — ended here in divorce.

The slender blonde actress and her author-actor husband, who took many bows together during the years they were collaborated on stage productions, were granted reciprocal divorces, the court order denying Yvonne the right to collect alimony.

She also was refused the right to collect from Guitry for her part in plays produced with him during their marriage.

Guitry was the first to apply for divorce. The action of his wife, who now is in the United States, followed shortly after.

WON'T KISS ME

Court Lawyer Roars at Youth's Offer

Salt Lake City, Nov. 8—Six months in jail for three kisses—two months per kiss—was the sentence imposed on Ned Black, 25, here, despite his proposal to demonstrate upon the prosecutor, Gerland Irving, how innocuous they really were.

Black was charged with assault on Reva Woodhouse, 20, a month ago. She testified he kissed her against her will.

"She let me kiss her three times," he told the judge. "If you will allow me, your honor, I will demonstrate on the prosecutor here just how it was done."

"You won't kiss me," roared Irvine as the gavel banged down guffaws.

OPERA HEAD 27 YEARS ON JOB

'MET' DIRECTOR GAVE BIG HELP TO U. S. ARTISTS

By Universal Service

New York, Nov. 8—Giulio Gatti-Casazza, world renowned director of the Metropolitan Opera Association and sponsor of "American opera," will retire at the close of this winter's season, after 27 years as impresario of the famous organization.

Gatti-Casazza, who is 65, asked to be relieved of the post "in consideration of my rather mature age."

Correspondence between him and Paul D. Cravath, president of the association, disclosed that Gatti-Casazza had tendered his resignation in May, before sailing for a vacation in Italy.

Cravath prevailed upon him to reconsider on his return to New York this autumn. Gatti-Casazza stood by his decision on returning.

In the letter accepting "regretfully" Gatti-Casazza's resignation, Cravath praised the director and pointed out that many American artists had been acclaimed through his efforts.

SOCIETY, ALL DRESSED UP, FLOCKS TO N. Y. HORSE SHOW

Astors Missing, but Gowns and Jewels Reach Peak

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 8.—There wasn't an Astor, a Vanderbilt or a Mdivani prince in sight in Madison Square Garden when the national horse show opened.

For a while it seemed the people who came would have to look at the horses last night. But fears waned when a Danish princess appeared, and the James A. Farleys, and the New York club whose brother is engaged to the Spanish infanta.

It will go down in history as the great black velvet wrap-and-gardenia horse show. Orchids and ermine played second fiddle, and there was only a smattering of chinchilla.

And some of the Gold Coast diamonds stayed at home. Mrs. Belmina Kirby, the daughter of Gustavus Towne Kirby, was in full box-seat regalia: a coronet braid, a white moire gown and a cream-colored velvet wrap.

diamond bracelets measured five inches.

The prize costume was that of a woman who came alone, wearing an ostrich plume in her hair, a knee-length black dress and pink satin slippers. She said she had four names and some foreign titles "but hadn't time to go into that."

Another horsewoman, blonde Wilhelmina Kirby, the daughter of Gustavus Towne Kirby, was in full box-seat regalia: a coronet braid, a white moire gown and a cream-colored velvet wrap.

Minor style note: Men turned out in the usual silk toppers and in the collars called "gates ajar."

Darien, Ct., Nov. 8 (AP)—Charged with attempted murder in the wounding of two Darien policemen today, John Suminski, 23 of Jersey City, N. J., is being held here. His brother Alex and Frank Pintora, also of Jersey City have been questioned.

Suminski is alleged to have fired five shots at a police car containing Sergeant Edward Mugavero

STUDENT HELD IN SHOOTING

Beverly, Nov. 8—Chief of Police Daniel A. MacEachern left here this morning for Portland, Me., to bring back 16-year-old Lyman A. Welding of Wenham, who allegedly fired a shot from a rifle into the Beverly High School classroom yesterday.

When arrested at the Portland railroad station late last night the youngster was believed to learn that the alleged shot went wild and did not strike any of his classmates.

Welding, with black eyes and puffed lips, following a street fight with a classmate, at the morning session, returned to school with a .22-caliber rifle, and fired a shot through the school window, according to police. The bullet embedded in the ceiling of the classroom.

He told police at Portland that his classmates picked on him because he came from a small town.

Red Agitators of Violence Are False Friends to Desert Labor, Says R. W. Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD
Noted Author and Former U. S. Ambassador to Italy

The pink magazines make it appear that the cause of the American worker must be heard through the mouths of Communism and the pens of anarchists who wear long hair and speak in a falsetto voice.

This the decent American worker resents and should resent.

The pink writer and the Red labor leader are more damaging to the peaceful gains in virile labor organization than anywhere else.

The real aim of the imported or domestic Red rabble-rouser is not the benefit of the worker who sometimes has to battle to gain and maintain his rights.

AIM AT REVOLUTION

THE AIM OF THE RED LEADER IS TO MAKE A STRIKE A REVOLUTION. HE MAY MAKE IT APPEAR THAT HE URGES THE DECENT STRIKER ACTING WITHIN HIS RIGHTS TO PUT PRESSURE ON EMPLOYERS. BUT—

The real object is to cause strikers to be the cat's paws for demonstration against law and order, against peace, against the Constitution and the state, to be puppets of REVOLUTION.

The Red rabble-rousers, who carry the banners of "Justice" and "Mercy" and "Compassion" and write under the protection of FREE SPEECH AND CIVIL LIBERTY, throw no rocks THEMSELVES.

In college pink meetings, in highbrow "reviews" and "weeklies," they may do everything to encourage the weak, the criminal or the desperate to go out and defy the law and the whole population of the United States.

CRY OF "MARTYR"

When the murderer, or rioter or incendiary is arrested the INTELLECTUAL REDS in their cosy college rooms, or publication offices—AND EVEN IN ROME PULPITS—cry out that Red-baiters are abroad, that the punished man was "framed by the capitalists" and by a brutal police.

And then they add that the violent and guilty Red-fanatic whom they have urged into his trouble is a MARTYR in the "cause" of LABOR.

This "MARTYR," created by the safe and canny RED WRITERS and FOREIGN CUCKOOS, may be a lovely "MARTYR," but he is no friend to DECENT ORGANIZED LABOR.

Usually he is NOT a laborer.
Usually he is NOT decent.
Usually he is NOT American.

IN THE ABSENCE OF EFFECTIVE ACTION BY A GOVERNMENT ASLEEP WITH SICKISH SENTIMENTALITY, THE JOB OF KICKING OUT THE RED CUCKOO FROM THE FACTORY, MILL OR MINE AND FROM LABOR ORGANIZATION AND LABOR FELLOWSHIP SHOULD REST ON AMERICAN LABORERS THEMSELVES.

MENACE OF REDS

And organized labor is fighting the menace now.

Imagine any American laboring man who found a war spy at the next machine plotting against the job, the community, the safety of America.

Why! He would wipe up the floor with that spy. He would beat him up and throw him into the back windows of a police station and then WASH HIS HANDS.

The Red is as menacing to America as a war spy.

Every real laborer in the United States who does not wish to lower his standard of living to the Russian standard, every one who wants a permanent job and the American way of making a safe future for his children must know that:

THE RED IS A RAT IN THE BREAD OF LABOR ITSELF.

The time may come when every industrial plant will have a committee of organized labor to do what the government is NOT doing—kick the foreign inspired Red OUT of our American scenery.

cerned with putting down strikes and starting Fascism," but they may be wiser than that. "Reactionaries" have often shown surprisingly good judgment in emergencies.

Pleasant news from Florida announces passage, two to one, of a sensible, humane bill. Colonel Frank B. Shutts, Miami newspaper owner wires: "The five thousand dollar homestead exemption amendment has been adopted by more than two to one vote. Your co-operation in this matter very helpful and it is appreciated. The large, financial interest of the state opposed it. The press was almost unanimously against it."

Colonel Shutts adds that a constitutional amendment exempting moving picture enterprises from all taxes and assessments for fifteen years was also adopted. This is less important to Hollywood than it would have been had not Mr. Sinclair been defeated.

A similar telegram signed John E. Cecil, executive secretary Home Owners' League of Florida, announcing passage of the bill "exempting small homes and farms up to one hundred and sixty acres, together with all improvements thereon, from taxation," says, "your excellent editorials were a large factor and were extensively quoted by papers, large and small, throughout the state. Opposing papers made a strong but futile effort to discredit statements made by you."

It is pleasing to have had a hand in making it possible for Americans, in one state at least, to say, "I own a roof and a piece of land that tax gatherers cannot take away from me or my children."

The New York state voters agreed with Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt that the latters' good friend, Mrs. Caroline O'Day, would make a first class congresswoman-at-large from New York. They gave her a plurality of more than six hundred thousand.

Herbert H. Lehman, New York governor running for re-election, carried the state by nearly a million.

When former commissioner Dorman, of New York, sent word to this writer that he would like to have a contribution for Mr. Lehman's campaign, the answer was: "Governor Lehman doesn't need any contributions and needs no campaigning. He will be re-elected by at least 600,000." Lehman added about 300,000 to that estimate.

ROPER PLEDGES REDUCTION IN RELIEF COST

By Universal Service.

Washington, Nov. 8—Secretary of Commerce Roper, pledged the administration will gradually reduce federal emergency measures as normal conditions are restored "and business, states and localities assume their responsibilities."

He promised business will not be shouldered with excessive taxes which would prevent return of normal and prosperous conditions.

The election over, Roper said now is the time to "stop talking so much about individual initiative, and "do something about it."

COUNTS ACHIEVEMENTS

Speaking over the radio, the Commerce Secretary counted achievements of the New Deal and declared:

"In our transition from excessively individualistic and in many cases strait-jacketed conditions of the immediate past to the more co-operative era which we are now entering, we must keep in mind the fact that citizens cannot properly demand rights unless they are willing to assume the responsibilities inherent in those rights.

"To illustrate, if we wish to exercise the right of not working—that is to strike—this right should be safeguarded; but in so doing we should defend the right not to strike—that is, the right to work without molestation."

DENIES REGIMENTATION

The immediate task, he said is to maintain and consolidate the gains made in the first twenty months of the Roosevelt administration. He denied charges these policies sought to "regiment" the country, and added:

"Many of our people do not realize that in the national recovery program the President has been operating along two lines; (1) Emergency relief with recovery, and (2) Reforms in the old order that look as far as is possible to safeguarding against destructive economic and social catastrophe in the future.

"Let us not confuse the two endeavors by failing to recognize that emergency requirements will be gradually retired as normal conditions are restored and business, states and localities assume their responsibilities."

Woodland, Calif., Nov. 8—First degree murder—or acquittal.

Either of these verdicts was demanded by Prosecutor C. C. McDonald, as he began his final argument in the "White Hibiscus" murder trial before a jury of eight men and four women.

He made it clear that he would be satisfied with no compromise verdict. He charged that Judson C. Doke, "wilfully, with malice aforethought shot to death Lamar Hollingshead, his wife's poet-sweetheart, last July 26 at the Hershey Ranch, near Woodland.

The state's attempt to bring Mrs. Doke to the stand to tell of letters her husband received from Mrs. Elizabeth Inglis, go-between of Mrs. Doke and Hollingshead, failed when process servers reported they had been unable to find the "White Hibiscus."

HIT THAT COLD

WHERE IT LIVES—

in the System!

Don't fool yourself about a cold! It's nothing to be taken lightly nor treated lightly. A cold is an internal infection that will quickly spread within the system unless promptly checked. The wise thing to take for a cold is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

First of all, it is distinctly a cold remedy and not a "cure-all." Secondly, it is an internal treatment. Thirdly, it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. That's the treatment a cold requires and anything less is taking chances. All druggists sell Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and reject substitute.

NEW DEAL SWEEP FLASHES 'GO AHEAD' TO BUSINESS

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

New York, Nov. 8—The outcome of the election may well prove to be a "let's go" signal for business.

Until the public had again placed its seal of approval on the New Deal," enterprisers were inclined to wait. If there was to be a political reversal in Congress, postponement of constructive plans, it was argued, might give business an opportunity to operate under more congenial conditions.

But the character of the Democratic sweep, bringing the clear implication that Franklin D. Roosevelt is likely to succeed himself and thus remain in high command through 1940, gives the private economic planner and promoter a foundation of comparative certainty—at least in the field of politics.

ELIMINATES DOUBTS

On the other hand, if the results of the balloting had been the reverse—that is, if the Democratic party had been rebuked with less than the anticipated vote for its representatives and senators—then new doubts about the future would have arisen. The business Tories and diehards would have been encouraged to hope that in 1936 a right wing administration would be carried into office.

In such circumstances, these reactionaries might have held back their business plans for the next two years, deferring forward-looking efforts wherever practicable until after the next presidential election.

The newest Democratic victory eliminates the doubts, and makes it clear to the realistic American business man that it is the part of wisdom for him to accept the present administration as the government and to undertake to work with it.

Of course, in the pre-election improved rapprochment between government and business of the last few weeks, which reached its climax a fortnight ago when President Roosevelt addressed the American Bankers Association, there was an attempt to discount the election result.

Fortunately, Mr. Roosevelt now recognizes the need of cooperation with business. He sees clearly that expanding business can relieve the government by absorbing men now on emergency public payrolls.

Spokesmen for the administration have reiterated to business and financial leadership that extreme conservatism on the part of the employing classes will merely tend to fan the spirit of radicalism in Congress.

BULL INFLUENCE

From the standpoint of the business cycle, which is nonpartisan, the public approval of the "in" suggests that no further political upheaval is impending in the next few years, and that business men and investors, in making their plans, can base their calculations on the expected results of the existing program.

Since business thrives on certainty and deteriorates on uncertainty, the clearing up of the political horizon is a bull point. Ordinarily politics is a minor influence on the course of business, but there are no ordinary times—when governmental agencies are spending about two-fifths of the national income.

In the timing of recovery, one more barrier, namely political uncertainty, has been removed. Economic fundamentals are all set for recovery, and the passing of the election should be helpful to the economic rehabilitation movement.

Grace Moore Stricken

Suffering from an acute attack of indigestion and a severe cold in the chest, Grace Moore, operatic and screen star, was speeding from Omaha today to a nursing home in New York. Physicians said she was in a "state of exhaustion" from overwork. Illness forces her to cancel present tour with the Metropolitan Quartet.

NEW POWER OF DEMOCRATS FACES TEST

No party in modern times ever was so dominant in Congress.

In the states, the Democrats are similarly in the saddle. With few contests in doubt, they appear to have 39 of the 48 governorships. The Democrats lost in some places they did not expect to lose, as in Maryland and New Jersey, but they also gained in some places where they had anticipated setbacks.

WHAT ABOUT CONGRESS?

The question uppermost in most Democratic minds—and in Republican, too, for that matter—was: What of the 74th Congress? Will it be more radical than the 73d? Will President Roosevelt be able to control these unwieldy majorities? Will the Democrats split into blocs and groups, as did the Republicans when they were heavily in the majority, in the days of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover?

The answers can only come with the convening of the new Congress.

The defeat of Senator Reed in Pennsylvania, of Senator Fess in Ohio, and of Robinson in Indiana, presents an opportunity for new Republican leadership, and it is believed that the more progressive Republicans left will not be slow in seizing it.

Most of the Republicans left in the Senate are of the progressive type. Borah of Idaho, Norris of Nebraska, Nye of North Dakota, McNary of Oregon, and they had little in common with the Reeds, Fesses and Robinsons.

G. O. P. LEADERLESS

The reconstruction of the Republican party—if it is to be reconstructed—will be watched with a great deal of interest.

For the moment, the Republicans are leaderless and disheartened. Two years ago, the country repudiated Hoover's leadership. Now the country, even more strikingly, has rejected the leadership that attempted to express itself through Henry P. Fletcher as Republican national chairman in this campaign.

In any event, it is apparent that the Republicans are at the crossroads, facing the greatest crisis in party history. They have been as badly off, not even in 1912, the year of the great schism. They had leaders left even then, the Penrroses and the Watsons and the Aldriches, all strong men. Now there are no strong men left.

As for presidential timber, their outlook is likewise unpromising. Granting that Hoover will not be a candidate again in '36, there remains the Congress and the governors to choose from. The Republicans have nine governors. They have a score of Senators and less than one hundred members of the House.

Only one acknowledged presidential aspirant came through in Tuesday's election—Senator Vandenburg in Michigan. On the House side, there is ex-Senator, now Representative, James W. Wadsworth of New York.

WORN OUT Playing Cards

New York, Nov. 8—The Ely Culbertsons are back in New York today from London, victors in the International Bridge Tournament held there, but exhausted by the grueling competition.

Both announced their withdrawal from play for the Vanderbilt Cup. Culbertson explained that his wife had suffered a nervous breakdown after the London tournament.

Returning on the liner Rex, with the internationally famous bridge couple, was Harold S. Vanderbilt, donor of the cup, who immediately engaged in the play for his own trophy.

CURLEY IN RACE FOR SENATE

chief secretary's position to Mr. Grant, if he will take it, as he can tell the people what is going on at the State House."

Curley revealed for the first time the text of Governor Ely's post-election letter of congratulations, a missive that was more or less of a surprise in view of recent political differences between the two.

LETTER FROM ELY

The letter read:

"My Dear Governor-elect:

"I trust you will accept my congratulations upon your splendid victory in the spirit in which I tender them.

"While we may have differences of opinion in matters political, I wish you to know that, on my part, I have never questioned your ability to give the State a splendid administration.

"I wish you every success. In January you will assume the responsibility of guiding the destiny of the greatest State in the Union from the point of view of liberal, yet conservatively constructive legislation and administration.

"My own tenure of office, which has been taken up mostly with emergencies, has not permitted me to do certain things that you may find the opportunity of doing, but I shall be glad to discuss them with you if you wish it.

Sincerely yours,

"JOSEPH B. ELY, Governor."

NEEDS NO ADVICE

Curley's comment was:

"I received this letter from Governor Ely. There is nothing mysterious in transacting the Governor's office. I don't think I require any advice as to how I'll run the office. I don't think such advice would be as helpful to me as would my own judgment.

Concerning the reported move of Governor Ely to hurry appointments so that quarters may be balked brought the retort from Curley:

"It is his privilege to do as he sees fit but filling positions that could wait without injury to the public service, would seem to me to be rather poor taste."

FROM DEAR OLD PORTO

The vacation trip that starts Saturday will be to get rest, play a little golf and absorb sunshine, Curley said. When he was asked if he planned to visit Porto Rico, whose delegation he served in an honorary capacity at the convention that nominated President Roosevelt, Curley revealed that he had received several invitations from there.

He would not budge, however, on details of his destination. He said that his daughter, Mary, and Miss Maylane Donnelly of Jamaica Plain would be on the trip.

At the suggestion of James Roosevelt, son of the President, he may call at the White House for a visit with President Roosevelt. He would not say whether the stop would be made on the way to his vacation resort or on the return trip.

Freighter Feared Burned

Tokyo, Nov. 8 (AP)—Fear that the Japanese freighter Ranan Maru, with a crew of 42, was destroyed by fire was expressed today in a Japanese news agency dispatch from Niigata, North Honshu island, Japan.

CHICOPEE ENDS SCHOOL TERM TONIGHT

Chicopee, Nov. 8—While Mayor Oneil Deroy and members of the school committee wage a verbal and written war, Chicopee's 7000 elementary grade and high school pupils are at school on a day to day basis, with today's sessions expected to be the last for some time.

Mayor Deroy charges the school committee has squandered the $500,000 appropriation for schools.

Members of the school committee, however, charge the mayor with playing politics in battling an added appropriation of $22,700 to the schools through transfer of a state treasurer's check representing Chicopee's share from state income tax.

Mayor Deroy declared he warned the school committee twice this year, early in the fiscal year and again in June, to remain inside the budget, and he advised eliminating the trade school, evening schools, art and sewing classes and other "luxury departments" but the school committee refused.

Two months ago, according to Mayor Deroy, the school committee further "flew in the face of Providence" and contracted for three oil heaters at a cost of $1450.

Yesterday, as a result of the battle and the empty school coffers, the pupils were told that they could not attend classes again until after December 1, when the fiscal year begins.

Late yesterday, however, it was discovered that the students could attend sessions again today, but that today's sessions probably would be the last.

Last Monday night the Board of Aldermen met and authorized transfer of the $22,700 state check to the school funds, but today Mayor Deroy asserted that he will fight the transfer "to the last ditch."

"I would rather go to jail than give this department any more money," said the mayor, "and the court will have to order me to approve the transfer before I will do anything about it."

Winthrop Woman Dies in Theater

Washington, Nov. 8 (INS)—Miss Helen F. Honan, 47, a native of Winthrop, Mass., employed in the government service for the past 10 years, died yesterday from a cerebral hemorrhage. She was stricken in a motion picture theater.

Survivors are three brothers, Daniel Honan, of Boston, a member of the State House of Representatives; Captain John L. Honan, this city; and William J. Honan, of Winthrop; five sisters, the Misses Mary Honan, of Boston; Angela Honan, of Newark, N. J.; Loretta Honan, of Wrentham, Mass., and Genevieve and Stell Honan, of Winthrop.

SINCLAIR 'RED,' SAYS HANFY

By International News Service

Berlin, Nov. 8—Election of Upton Sinclair as Governor of California would have been interpreted as a "public endorsement of Communism," Dr. Ernst F. G. Hanfstaengl, press chief of the Nazi party and a close confidant of Chancellor Hitler, declared today.

Reflecting the keen interest throughout Nazi Germany in the off-year election in the United States, Dr. Hanfstaengl characterized the victory of Acting Governor Merriam as a "historic national event." He said:

"There is reason to believe that a victory by Upton Sinclair would have been interpreted not as a victory for the Democratic party but as a public endorsement of Communism."

NEWTON OPENS CHEST DRIVE

With a colorful radio program of music, entertainment and speaking, Mayor Sinclair Weeks of Newton opened the Newton Community Chest Campaign last night over Station WMEX and the short wave WIXAL.

The mayor explained the need of community co-operation in caring for those in want and stressed particularly that the present time was the time to support the numerous private welfare agencies of the city.

March music by the ERA orchestra was included in the program, and musical numbers were contributed by Harry R. Rogers, tenor; Dr. J. Avary Dunn, Dr. Cecil Clark and Harold Bond, piano trio, pupils from the All-Newton Music School, and many others.

Deal on Jobs to Balk Hultman Ouster

Negotiations are under way to thwart Governor-elect James M. Curley in his avowed purpose of removing Police Commissioner Hultman from office, the Boston American learned today.

Governor Ely planned to climax a long political feud with the governor-elect by naming Hultman commissioner of public works, replacing Frank Lyman, whose term expired December 1.

Hultman, according to the program, was to resign immediately as police commissioner and General Charles H. Cole was to be named to this job for a five-year term.

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Morgan T. Ryan, who took the stump for General Cole in his primary gubernatorial fight against Mr. Curley, was to resign and be appointed legal advisor to the police commissioner.

Thus, Governor-elect Curley would be blocked in three major posts from making his own appointments and his declaration to fire Hultman would go for naught.

Hultman would get a $7500 job for three years. He is paid $8000 now and his term expires in June, 1935.

By appointing Cole as police commissioner, the Ely-Cole alliance would be further cemented and the governor-elect would have the power of selecting his own police head taken out of his hands.

FIVE-YEAR JOB

The law reads that an appointment of a police commissioner is for five years. Unlike other state offices it is not restricted by the unfilled term of the retiring commissioner. In other words, such an appointment would be good until 1939 and not only from now until next June.

Registrar Ryan is due for the axe as soon as the governor-elect can wield it, it is generally believed, and he, a staunch Ely supporter, would be well cared for in the capacity of legal advisor to Cole. This job pays $5000 annually. Ryan now gets $6000.

What would happen to Commissioner Lyman, a Republican, is a matter of conjecture, just as would be the matter of replacing Ryan in the registry of motor vehicles.

But the legal naming of Ryan's successor would be in the hands of the commissioner of public works—Mr. Hultman.

MAY ACT TOMORROW

Whether or not the governor planned to make the first move at the special Executive Council meeting called for tomorrow noon could not be determined.

It is believed, however, that he intended to rush the matter through while Lieutenant-Governor Bacon and two Republican governor's councillors were still smarting from their election day defeats.

Clubman Gets Kidnap Threat

Threat to kidnap his six-year-old son, Ermino, has been made to Manuel Cardewall, custodian of the Dante Club, an Italian-American organization in Cedar street, Somerville, police revealed today.

Cardewall, police said, received a letter yesterday on plain white paper and with brush-writing.

Believed by police to have been intentionally misspelled, the note said:

"If you don't five (apparently meant for "leave") the dante club you boy will hee kidnap."

Emergency Drive Opened

The Boston Emergency Campaign of 1935 was officially opened by Oscar W. Hausermann, general manager, who delivered an address before 300 members of the St. Vincent de Paul Societies in Catholic Union Hall.

250,000 TO SEE CADETS MARCH

More than 250,000 persons are expected to see 1200 cadets from West Point march through Boston Saturday en route to the Stadium to cheer the Army team.

The cadets will be a happy lot because from the end of the game until midnight they will be free to enjoy themselves as they wish.

Under the leadership of Major-General William D. Connor, superintendent of the military academy, and Lieutenant-Colonel Simon B. Buckner, Jr., commandant of the corps, the cadets will arrive in four trains at 8 a. m. Saturday.

After detraining at the Huntington avenue yards, the Corps will form for the march with the head of column in Huntington avenue, and at 9:30, led by their band of nearly 100 pieces under Lieutenant F. E. Resta, will start the march.

The route leads along Huntington avenue to Dartmouth street, north to Beacon street, east to Park, thence to the Park Street subway station, where special trains will be boarded for Cambridge.

En route, the parade will be reviewed by state, city and military officials.

The subway trains will take the Corps to Stadium station, where it will detrain, form in Boylston street and march to the Harvard yard.

After lunch at the Harvard Union, the Corps will assemble in front of Sever Hall and march via Dudley gate and across the John W. Weeks bridge to Soldiers Field.

Trio Accused in Mill Hi-Jack

Bridgeport, Ct., Nov. 8—Samuel Tornese, Frank Paige and Joseph Brusso are charged by the state with robbery, violence and kidnaping, in connection with the hi-jacking of a truckload of woolens coming from a Lowell, Mass., mill, in August.

Millen and Faber Arguments Today

Exceptions taken by Murton and Irving Millen and Abe Faber during their trial for robbery and murder were to be heard today before the full bench of the Supreme court of the Commonwealth. The sore throat that caused Attorney William Scharton to request a postponement is sufficiently better for him to take part.

MORRO CAPTAIN SAYS 'FIRING' DUE TO SPITE

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 8—Captain William E. Warms, on trial before a board of the steamboat inspection service on charges of negligence in connection with the burning of the liner Morro Castle, testified today that a suspension he received several years ago was the result of spite work by a subordinate.

He told the board that while he was in command of a freighter he discovered that a chief engineer's papers were false and had him discharged. The engineer, in order to get revenge, Warms said, filed charges that the captain had failed to hold fire drills in accordance with regulations.

Rough weather had prevented the holding of the drills, according to Warms. As a result of the charges he was suspended for 10 days.

One by one Warms replied to the charges against him on the stand today.

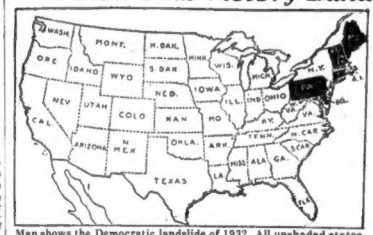
To the first, that he endangered the lives of passengers by delaying the sending out of an S O S, he asserted that the S O S had been ordered 15 minutes after he learned of the fire.

To the second, that he failed to stop the vessel to keep the flames from spreading with the wind, he explained that he had given orders with the purpose of turning the ship away from the wind, and when he found she was not turning fast enough, had ordered the port engine full speed astern and the starboard engine full speed ahead.

This was the last order given before communication with the engine room was cut off, according to his testimony.

He answered the charge that several of the fire hydrants were capped and could not be used by saying that as far as he knew this was only true of one of them.

New Deal Victory Landslide of 1932 and Today



Map shows the Democratic landslide of 1932. All unshaded states on this map voted for Roosevelt and the New Deal. States in black went Republican. The phrase "great open spaces" gains a new meaning in this vivid portrayal of New Deal victory. The aftermath of Tuesday's election. The New Deal sweep of the country is again clearly shown by the unshaded states, which went Democratic. Those in black elected Republican senators or governors, while those with lines across them, New Jersey and Maryland, elected a Democratic senator and a Republican governor.

Democrats Rule States

Of 34 states which named governors this week, 25 picked Democrats. The G. O. P. was successful in electing only seven governors, with one seat going to a Progressive and one to the Farmer-Labor party.

Everett Matron Seeks Support

Separate support is sought by Mrs. Irene Rothstein of Florence street, Everett, from Joseph Rothstein, 29, an attorney, in a hearing before Middlesex probate court, to be continued tomorrow. Rothstein claims he secured a Nevada divorce a year ago on grounds that his wife was insane when he married her in 1929.

Dry Law Repealed in South Dakota

Pierre, S. D., Nov. 8—South Dakota, which turned in a complete Democratic landslide, also voted for repeal of the state's prohibition law, according to incomplete returns today.

In 517 scattered precincts, the vote was: For Repeal, 26,431; Against Repeal, 19,530. The cities voted about 2 to 1 for the return of liquor.

Munition Company Pays $5 Dividend

Paris, Nov. 8 (INS)—On the heels of the American Senate's munitions investigation, and announcement that Britain may undertake a similar inquiry, the French public was afforded an insight into the state of the arms industry when the Agence Economique announced that Schneider & Co., munitions makers, had declared a $5.25 dividend.

POLICE ARREST COUNCILLOR

City Councillor Richard Gleason of Roxbury was arrested in the corridor of the Municipal court today on warrants charging him with assault and battery on a police officer, wanton destruction of a police officer's uniform and drunkenness.

A few minutes later, at his arraignment before Judge James H. Devlin, he pleaded not guilty. Bail of $100 was ordered and his case was continued until November 15.

James Buckley, 23, of Baker street, West Roxbury, and William Glynn, 31, of Sarsfield street, Roxbury, alleged accomplices of Gleason, yesterday, when Sergeant John D. Holmes was attacked while arresting the men at Northampton street and Shawmut avenue, pleaded not guilty to assault and battery on the officer and drunkenness and furnished $100 bail.

The alleged attack took place, according to Sergt. Holmes, when he investigated a large crowd which had gathered around a parked car.

Mexico Governor Asks Death for All Priests

By International News Service

Mexico City, Nov. 8—Governor Saturnino Osornio of the State of Queretaro, one of the most deeply religious sections of all Mexico, today issued a statement calling upon the federal government to execute all Catholic priests in the country by a firing squad.

The demand followed presentation yesterday in the Chamber of Deputies of a petition from a group of radical educators likewise demanding execution of the priests as a result of sedition charges lodged against them by the government.

"We have shown enough tolerance toward the clergy," said the governor's statement. "We now demand justice.

"These men should be executed. Firing squads must take care of them or they will continue to make trouble."

Governor Osornio charged that priests exiled from his state had joined rebels in the State of Guanajuato.

Two days ago the governor signed a decree limiting the number of priests in Queretaro to one for every 200,000 population that's how cheap electricity is!

ACTUALLY, our headline is a gross understatement. With an electric water heater in your home, one cent will buy several baths for baby—nearly a week of them, in fact.

For, electricity is cheap—among the cheapest commodities on earth, and one of the very few whose price has continuously gone down, instead of up, during the past ten years. Use more of it and life will be easier, pleasanter. You can easily afford to do so.

CORTEZ, GUEST WITH VALLEE ON AIR

N.B.C.

Suave and debonair Ricardo Cortez of the Hollywood film colony comes to the air as a special guest of the colorful "Rudy Vallee Varieties" program tonight (WEEI) from 8 until 9 o'clock.

In addition to the personal appearance of Cortez, the Vallee studio show presents Dudley Chambers and his chorus of eighty mixed voices, likewise The Three Cheers, popular male "mike" trio who have won wide radio acclaim recently as members of the "Al Pierce Gang" programs in California.

Another important screen personality puts in a broadcasting turn tonight (WNAC) while the 45 minutes from Hollywood" presentation has the coast to coast place. Chester Morris submits to an interview along there between 10 o'clock and 15 minutes before 11 p. m. Then too, the same setting includes a preview of the new "Kin Millions" picture, starring Eddie Cantor and Block and Sully comedy.

FRENCH FAVORITE

Paul Whiteman and his company of entertainers enter upon a new series of "Continental Nights" musical radioing tonight (WEEI) on the stroke of 10 o'clock. Yvonne Gall, distinguished French prima donna is the star, brought to the American broadcasting ranks from recent Paris Opera Comique triumphs. Her outstanding solo is to be the beautiful "Jewel Song" from "Faust" and is offered as a special arrangement by the Whiteman orchestra as well.

* * *

Eddie Peabody, genius of the banjo, occupies the sound sanctum spotlight with her "Showboat" studio crew tonight (WEEI) from 9 to 10 attraction. Lanny Ross, Conrad Thibault and the new ceremony master Frank McIntyre, afford the balance of the doings in song and story.

LOCAL LATHER

It's rather a good thing that glib local loud-speaker lad who so freely posted $1000 as a "guarantee" as to his being the first and most authentic election return service, didn't name THIS newspaper, because if he had done so, his empire would be out exactly one grand this autumn day of our lord . . . Said loquacious spokesman also made a promise or two about who he would be sure to introduce on the air. One of which he soon found he was unable to fulfill . . . Jack Dempsey has done some Hub broadcasting the last night or so and his voice is deeper than it was a year ago by at least two tones.

CUBANS GUARD U. S. ENVOY

Copyright, 1934, By International News Service

Washington, Nov. 8—Ambassador Jefferson Caffery in Havana is in constant danger of assassination by Cuban terrorists.

The danger has become so grave that he is constantly guarded by Cuban detectives and soldiers. His motor car is always preceded by a government machine carrying detectives or soldiers. Government troops are constantly on guard at the American embassy.

Terrorists have fired on the American embassy several times, wounding a soldier guard on one occasion.

Those who have recently visited Caffery stated today his staff fear he may be assassinated if terroristic conditions continue. The state department is worried.

However, the danger lies not from the fact that there is any personal animosity toward him. Officials here feel the same situation would apply to any American ambassador appointed to Havana at the present time.

Elder Daughter Will Wed American's Son

A REAL LOVE MATCH

By International News Service

Rome, Nov. 8—Infanta Beatriz, elder daughter of former King Alfonso of Spain, has triumphed where her two brothers failed, winning her father's acquiescence to a love match.

Her engagement to Prince Alexander Torlonia of Civitella Cesi, son of a New York society woman, is formally announced.

The Prince's mother is the former Elsie Moore, daughter of the late Charles A. Moore, wealthy New York hardware merchant. She divorced the late Duke Marino Torlonia six years ago in Connecticut. They were married in 1907.

The 25-year-old Infanta and the young Italian prince first met in Rome five months ago.

Living apart from his wife, the former Princess Victoria of Britain, estranged from his heir and opposing the romance of his third son, Alfonso is believed anxious to share the happiness of his daughter.

He has never forgiven the former prince of the Asturias for his marriage to Edelmira Sampedro, daughter of a wealthy Cuban merchant. The prince's wife was reported bent on seeking a Rota annulment of the marriage.

Delayed four days by head winds and fog the British three-masted schooner Irene Myrtle arrived here today from Weymouth, N. S., with 233,000 feet of spruce lumber which longshoremen are unloading at her berth in Charlestown.

The schooner, in command of Captain Thomas Antle, left Weymouth September 28 and was due here Saturday. For a time fear was felt for her safety and she was the object of a search by coast guard.

WASH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Win Back Pep . . . Vigor . . . Vitality

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too-frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes need washing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backaches, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, lumbago, smarting feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints every day and get rid of 4 pounds of waste matter, your body will take up these poisons causing serious trouble. It may keep you out and lay you up for many months. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS—a doctor's prescription . . . which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 5 minutes, for they may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable medicine that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

PILES SUFFER NO MORE!

No more pain! No more itching or scratching! No more torture when you sit or walk! No more torment at the stool! The relief of Piles has now been solved. No matter what the form of Piles you suffer from—painful, itching, bleeding, blind or protruding—genuine relief for you lies in Pazo Ointment.

Pazo not only stops the pain and itching and makes defecation easy, but it tends to correct the condition of Piles as a whole. This is because Pazo is threefold in effect. It is (1) soothing, (2) healing, (3) absorbing. Thus, it not only allays the inflammation and repairs torn tissue, but actually reduces the swollen blood vessels, which are Piles. The perfect application maker Pazo double effective. Perforated File Pipe attaches to tube reaches high up in the rectum and thoroughly medicates all affected parts. Get Pazo today at any drug store and see the relief it means. You will be more than amazed, more than grateful.

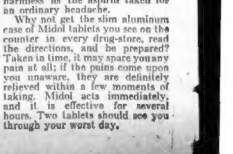
Please don't wait as long as I did:



"I heard about Mildol several years before I tried it. Now I know that I suffered time after time when there wasn't any need. Mildol does relieve pain quickly, at least for me, and I urge anyone who suffers in this way to try it without delay."

These could well be the words of more than one woman who has finally tried Mildol, and found that it actually does what its makers say it will do. Perhaps you have hesitated to try Mildol for fear of some harmful effect. Mildol does not contain narcotics, and is as harmless as the aspirin taken for an ordinary headache.

Why not get the slim aluminum case of Mildol tablets you see on the counter in every drug-store, read the directions, and be prepared? Taken in time, it may spare you many pain at all; if the pains come upon you unaware, they are definitely relieved within a few moments of taking. Mildol acts immediately, and it is effective for several hours. Two tablets should see you through your worst day.

ROSAMOND PINCHOT HEADS CAST FOR "THE BRAVE LIVE ON," ORIGINAL M-G-M FILM

Anita Loos Wants Fred Astaire Starred in Film Based on Nijinsky's Life

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Nov. 8—Now that Rosamond Pinchot, niece of the governor of Pennsylvania and socialite, has settled down in Beverly Hills as a householder, all she needed was her first assignment on her new M-G-M contract. That came when David O. Selznick chose "The Brave Live On," an original by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements, for her.

So far so good, but I don't like David's statement that Rosamond has "greater possibilities than any new personality since Katharine Hepburn." Flattering advance publicity is always bad for any actress and it would be much better to wait until Miss Pinchot does something even if she was Max Reinhardt's choice for the nun in "The Miracle." However, he may be right.

He produced Katie Hepburn's first success, "Bill of Divorcement," for RKO.

What is there about this Joe Morrison? Everybody in Hollywood is saying that he is the greatest film bet in years. Paramount who had kind of a headache when they couldn't get together with Lanny Ross in his movies, isn't doing any boasting but those who have seen Joe's new tests, say he is a knockout. He gets his chance in "Win Or Lose" with Burns and Allen when they return from their holiday in Europe. Marian Mansfield, also a radio entertainer, will also have a part in the picture. Looks as if Paramount has gone completely radio.

Anita Loos has a grand idea for the lithe, attractive Fred Astaire, Hollywood's latest rage. She wants to see him play the role of Nijinsky and Anita should know since she spent considerable time with Diaghelf, the boss of the book at Baden Baden, and she knows all about Nijinsky. Interesting about Astaire. RKO really engaged Astaire on a spec. Although he was known on the stage he was unknown in the movies. His next picture is "In Person" which will star the popular Ginger Rogers and the dancer. It's by Samuel Hopkins Adams, author of "It Happened One Night."

Walter Wanger never rests until he puts his ideas into the movies. Now he plans a big extravagant number called "Vogues of 1935"—a fashion production with plenty of hot cha gals to set off his styles. The leads will be models, famous models gathered from all over the globe, girls who can wear clothes and look the last word in ultra smartness. This picture goes into production early next year.

John and Marcella Boles have been busy telling their friends about their wonderful trip through the Panama Canal. The most exciting moment came at the very end when John was rushed to the broadcasting station to sing with Gloria Swanson. He wins the palm for good sportsmanship. The Boles landed in San Diego at one o'clock, the day of the broadcast. An automobile brought John hurrying to the radio station where he rehearsed for the first time, not only the songs but the dialogue. A motorcycle escort brought him and Mrs. Boles safely through traffic after the world's most hectic automobile drive.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The champ, MAXIE BAER, proving himself no mean bridge player at CONSTANCE TALMADGE NETCHER'S farewell party; JEAN HARLOW, supervising everyone with some intricate dance steps; WILLIAM POWELL, watching her, declared JEAN, who never had a dance lesson, was a better dancer than many professionals; MRS. CLARK GABLE leaving an exciting bridge game to go home with CLARK, who had an early studio call; EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF, who cooks everything but Danish pastry and he could probably make that if he ever tried it, listening to MRS. CARL BRISSON talk on her specialty; CONSTANCE in dress pajamas, suddenly appearing in a pink marabou trimmed costume, very becoming; ROSE DOLLY NETCHER dancing between bridge hands; ANN FRANKLYN entertaining with a reception for DORIS KENYON following her debut as an opera singer in "Secret of Suzanne"; the MONTA BELLS, and I mean the first MRS. BELL, at the KING GILLETTES' party; MONTA, so we hear, is on his knees to his first wife now, and it looks like a big reconciliation. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

On Tremont Bill

Tomorrow's program at the Tremont features Spencer Tracy in "Mad Game," in which the star is supported by Claire Trevor and a strong cast. On the same bill is "All American," with Richard Arlen and Gloria Stuart as the stars. The latest Walt Disney Silly Symphony and other short subjects complete the program. Coming tonight are "It Happened One Night," with Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert in the leading roles, and "Crime Doctor," featuring Karen Morley and Otto Kruger.

Free Show

A free show for children will be given Saturday morning at the Columbia Theater, which has just been reconditioned and opened under the management of F. E. Lieberman.

Heroine in New Love Drama

Claire Trevor, above, is the charming star of "Elinor Norton," screen play from the Mary Roberts Rinehart novel, which is at the Paramount and Fenway. James Cagney, in "The St. Louis Kid," shares honors on the program.

Romantic Lovers of the 90's on the Screen

JOHN BOLES IRENE DUNNE

John Boles and Irene Dunne share star honors in the screen version of Edith Wharton's "Age of Innocence," which comes to the Keith Memorial Saturday. There will be a special preview tomorrow night at 10 o'clock.

'Aurora's Wedding' by Ballet

For the opening program of The Monte Carlo Ballet Russe, which comes to the Boston Opera House next Tuesday evening, "Aurora's Wedding," with music by Tchaikovsky and choreography by Marius Petipa will be the opening ballet. The colorful costumes for the presentation are by Leon Bakst, and in the cast are Miles. Cabanie, Kipkovska, Ivanova, Morosova, Nelidova, Obidenna, Osato, Razoumova, Serova, and other famous ballerinas of the group, together with M. Leonide Massine, David Lichine, Jurek Shabelevsky, Roman Jasinsky, Paul Petroff and Roland Guerard.

David Lichine

Other numbers on the opening program include one of the newest and most famous of the Ballet Russe repertoire, "The Fantastic Toy-Shop," with music by Giacomo Rossini, and the ballet by Leonide Massine, one of Europe's most famous originators of ballets.

A ballet set to Johann Strauss' "The Beautiful Blue Danube" is also on the opening program, with the dance arrangement by Roger Desormiere, scenery by Vladimir Polunin, and costumes by Etienne de Beaumont. Miles. Tatiana Riabouchinska, Vera Zorina, Tamara Tchinarova, Leonide Massine, David Lichine, Marian Ladre, Jean Hoywer, Tatiana Chamie and others will appear.

Coming to Scollay

Opening tomorrow at the Scollay Square the new big time vaudeville bill is headed by Mills, Kay and Martin, a comedy trio in "Vivell-See." Leavitt and Lockwood, with Betty Raye, Gene Allon, and Diane Abbey. The Climax Revue and Joe Termini are other headliners on the new bill.

The screen attraction is "The St. Louis Kid," starring James Cagney, with Patricia Ellis and Allen Jenkins in the supporting cast.

Raft's Latest Among New Films

George Raft's newest picture, "Limehouse Blues," featuring Anna May Wong and Jean Parker, takes over the screen at the Metropolitan tomorrow.

Set in London's notorious Limehouse underworld, the story is by Arthur Phillips and centers around a half cast gangster chief, Kent Taylor, Montague Love, Billy Bevan and Robert Loraine are in the supporting cast.

The new stage revue brings Frances Arms, better known from coast to coast as the Mrs. Rubinoff of the Eddie Cantor broadcasts, as the star of "Contrasts," a musical burlesque of the entertainment world. Bobby May, Carter and Holmes, the Rimac Company and the Elida Ballet are featured in the cast. Fabien Sevitzky and the Grand Orchestra contribute another in the series of "Musical Impressions."

At Loew's State, "The Merry Widow," co-starring Maurice Chevalier as Prince Danilo and Jeanette MacDonald as Sonya, will be held over for another week. The production of the famous operetta has been directed by Ernst Lubitsch, and in the cast are Una Merkel, Edward Everett Horton, George Barbier and the Albertina Rasch girls. The latest Mickey Mouse cartoon, Edwin C. Hill as the Globe Trotter of Hearst Metrotone News and other short subjects are included on the program. Arthur Martel continues as guest organist.

By Betty Alden

NO MATTER HOW MUCH we may write about debutante parties, we can't keep up with them . . . the only thing to do is to take them as they come and play no favorites.

In golden brocade which would endear itself to any young girl, Miss Hope Blanchard will be honored at a ball at the Ritz-Carlton this evening with Miss King Woodward in a queenly white crepe creation and Miss Louise Morgan in rustling white taffeta. These three debutantes will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Curtis of Marlboro street . . .

HOPE BLANCHARD

Miss Morgan is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Converse of Westwood and of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan of New York and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Junius Morgan of New York. She has spent several of her school years in England. Mr. and Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth are entertaining at dinner before the dance Miss Olivia Morgan, a cousin, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Morgan of Dedham, one of the handsomest buds of the season. Mrs. Henry Morgan, her aunt, is the former Catherine Adams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams.

Ushers for Ball

THE USHERS' DINNER BEFORE the ball at the Ritz-Carlton will be given by Mr. and Mrs. William Stuart Spaulding at their home, 41 Beacon street. James Otis and William S. Spaulding, Jr., will serve as head ushers, assisted by Robert Gardiner, Jr., George Whitney, Arthur Perry, Jr., Alfred Hallowell, Thomas T. P. Whitney, Edward Motley, Jr., Charles F. Adams, Jr., John G. Storey, Philip S. Weld, Samuel Drury, Jr., Franklin A. Reece, Jr., William Van Winkle, Jr., Herbert Jacques, Jr., Samuel Warren, Gaspar G. Bacon, Jr., Charles F. Woodward, Hamilton Hadden, Huntington Thom, Nathaniel Goodhue, Joseph H. Choate, 3d, Joseph Richardson, Charles Sturgis, Ladd McMillan . . .

Among the girls at the dinner will be Margaret Hallowell, Louise Harding, Elise Russell, Marjorie Saltonstall, Susan Dalton, Jeannie Paine, Edith Wolcott, Celina Robbins, Jean Tuckerman, Isabella Gardner, Lily Warren, Alice Spaulding, and the three guests of honor.

Other dinners being given before the ball will be one by Mrs. Louis Curtis of Beacon street, who will entertain Mr. and Mrs. Junius Morgan; Miss Patricia Farley, daughter of Mrs. Eliot Farley, who will entertain a number of young guests; Miss Lorraine Young, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Loring Young, who was presented last season; Mrs. George H. Lyman, Jr.; Mrs. George E. Abbott, who will entertain at her Chestnut Hill home; Mrs. Richard Cary Curtis, who will give a dinner for her niece, Miss Mary Burnett Grosvenor of Providence; Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Blanchard, for friends of their older daughter, Miss Rosamond Blanchard; Mrs. Howard Grew, in honor of Miss Olivia Osborne, and Mr. and Mrs. Gaylord Cummin for their debutante daughter, Miss Edith Cummin.

Fashion Show Proves Gala Event

If you had the least strain of thrift in you, you certainly had to hang on to it tightly yesterday at the Fashion Show at the Copley-Plaza for the benefit of the South End Day Nursery . . . the tendency of extravagance, elegance, magnificence and expense was manifested in clothes, hats, furs and decorations . . .

The luncheon at noon was largely attended . . . we glimpsed Mrs. H. Appleton Knowles in black velvet with a KEEN hat of the same material . . . Mrs. Robert C. Knowles, general chairman, in black with white galyak trim . . . Mrs. Charles Innes in garbet frock under a mink coat . . .

Mrs. William C. Kean, held them up at the door, in a snoozy creation of ermine pelts, which was pale beige in color and boasted a cape and hat to match . . . snoozy is the word! Mrs. Alan Weatherby wore a soft grey wool . . . Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French in exotic Russian cocktail dress of black with silver buttons. Mrs. French was one of the outstanding models in the fashion show and created a sensation in Cossack hat and cape of real Chinchilla, the world's most flattering fur.

Evening Gown of Black Satin

MRS. JOSEPH R. McCOOLE took the spotlight with Mrs. French as the outstanding model of the day . . . she was particularly effective in black satin evening dress touched with jade green and worn with an overwhelming cape of jade green ostrich feathers which came off and could be carried as a fan. She also wore the new Russian cocktail effect in court red velvet and high turban.

Miss Polly Cotter made a fragile and lovely bride as always . . . her arms were filled with waxy Calla lilies and the gown was very severe with untrimmed veil of tulle. Miss Dorothy Knowles and Mrs. Frank Sawyer were bridesmaids in gentian blue bagheera with ingenue hats of silver lace. Mrs. Sawyer is lovely and was very much admired in several smart creations by Fredley . . .

Polly Cotter

The most vivacious model was Carlotta Kraus . . . her blonde beauty was accentuated by the ravishing models, especially the gorgeous and glamorous negligees and tea-gowns by Makhanna . . . When does one wear a negligee, we asked ourselves? Temptation whispered to us to indulge in a glorious affair of garnet red velvet with golden girdle . . . but who would see it except the Sahiki? . . . Thrift won!

Winter Sports Garb Modelled

MISS LEE MARSTON has lost none of her debutante charm as she displayed what the bright young girl will wear for sports this winter . . . her brown felt hat by Keane had just the right cache. The new hats are especially noticeable and we did not see one of those big, soft, floppy berets which we love so much. Tricornes, pill-boxes, Mad-Hatters, and the very new shovels have swept them away.

In the fashionable audience we saw Mrs. George Chapman in regal blue velvet and grey furs . . . Mrs. Harry Barrett in charge of the money box wearing a creation of blue velvet and silver lame . . . Mrs. Joseph Kendall in smart black with high-crowned turban shot with a quill . . . Mrs. Walter H. Mansfield in autumn brown and yellow roses . . . Mrs. Elbert Duncan in black astrakhan . . . Mrs. K. Squire Langmaid in brown . . . Mrs. Albion Boothby in snappy sport ensemble of green and beaver . . . Mrs. John Lemon chic in black with mink . . . Mrs. James C. Grey in a beautiful black tulip shade. She was one of the beautiful models. It was a great success and a gorgeous display of what the women of Boston SHOULD wear, but probably won't.

MISS HOPE BAKER MAKES DEBUT AT TEA IN NEWTON CENTER

BUSY WITH PLANS FOR BENEFITS IN NEAR FUTURE

MISS JANE BOGARDUS MISS ELEANOR STEPHENSON MISS ELIZABETH B. SWIFT

Plan benefit for the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals. Miss Jane Bogardus, Miss Eleanor Stephenson and Miss Elizabeth E. Swift snapped at the Ritz-Carlton, where they discussed plans for the coming dance recital by Miriam Winslow, Boston society's most talented dancer, to be held November 22. A large commitee of debs and post-debs, under Miss Stephenson's guidance, are working hard for this benefit performance. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Home Fete for Daughter of Roy Bakers

WEARING a silvery blue gown, fashioned on youthful slim lines with a flaring skirt, Miss Hope Baker, daughter of Mrs. Roy Ball Baker of Newton Center, was presented this afternoon at a tea with dancing at her mother's home.

She carried a corsage of yellow roses. Mrs. Baker received with her gowned in black velvet and Miss Charlotte Ann Baker, a post debutante, who had charge of the pourers, was gowned in clinging black satin with a gardenia corsage.

The guest of honor's cousin, Miss Betsy Tower of Brookline, who is a sub-debutante, was a pourer along with Miss Barbara McKissock, Miss Elizabeth Brown, Miss Barbara Taft, Miss Hope Van Horsen and Miss Lois Alley. Mr. Roy Ball Baker, a brother, and Mr. Charles Harrison Prentice of Worcester, who is Mrs. Baker's house guest during the football season, had charge of a few young gentlemen as ushers.

Miss Baker is a student at Miss Wheelock's school this season.

Miss Winslow to Give Dance Recital

MISS MARION WINSLOW AND her dance group are to appear in a benefit dancing recital at the Repertory Theater on Thursday evening, November 22, at 8:30 o'clock. The young men's committee of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals, the beneficiary of the concert, is engaged in making preparations to make this event a very social and distinguished event.

Mr. Zabdiel Adams, chairman of the committee, is being assisted by the Messrs. Francis V. Balch, chairman of arrangements; Elliot Atkinson, chairman of the program; Ernest Jacoby, Jr., chairman of the patron committee; Robert Bowler, Jr., chairman of the ticket committee. Other members of this group are William B. Bacon, William E. Putnam, 3d, John K. Bottomely and George M. Bartol.

Miss Eleanor Stephenson is the chairman of the usher committee which is co-operating with the young men's committee. Included among her assistants are the Misses Elizabeth Swift, Jane Bogardus, Elizabeth Marston, Caroline Oveson, Geraldine Sampson, Janet Marston, Molly Rogers, Edith Cummin, Elizabeth Brooks, Katrina Miller, Jane Whitney, Ann Gallagher, Molly Robbins, Martha Seabury, Jean Gordon, Rosamond Pratt, Mary Esther Cooper, Louise Harding, Frances Seaver, Joan Jacoby, Edith Lewis, Joan Chapin, Sally Adams and Mrs. Robert Hurlbut and Mrs. Robert B. Bowler, Jr.

Society Notes

MRS. S. HUNTINGTON WOLCOTT and Miss Edith Prescott Wolcott of Milton, returned today from New York where they have been for a brief stay at the St. Regis Hotel. Miss Wolcott's marriage to Charles Devens will be one of the outstanding social events of late November, the ceremony scheduled for Nov. 30 at Emmanuel Church.

MRS. J. FRED BROWN, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Carey of Cambridge and Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Jr., with Miss Barbara Wendell of Chicago, formerly of Boston, are all in New York at the moment. Miss Wendell's betrothal to Mr. Horace Soule of Brookline was recently announced.

Music Series for Children

A DOZEN SOCIALLY PROMINENT Cambridge matrons have this week been addressing, inserting and stamping invitations to the Saturday morning concerts for juniors to be held in Sanders theater, Harvard University, beginning next month. The announcements will be mailed from the home of Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Charles F. Toppan, who is particularly interested in planning attractive printed matter, has been in charge of this phase of the work. Subscribers to the concert series, to be given December 8, January 12 and March 2 at 10:15 o'clock, will have the same seats for each program.

Russell Ames Cook, director of the Symphonic Ensemble of Boston and a lecturer on music at the Harvard Graduate School of Education, will conduct and supply oral program notes about each number.

As the list of those receiving announcements is necessarily limited, the committee hopes that many others interested in this opportunity, designed particularly for young people, will make reservations through Mrs. Eliot Hubbard, Jr., PORter 1192.

Juniors Aid Red Cross Drive

ONE part in the annual Red Cross Roll-Call taken by Juniors, was the participation in a nation-wide broacast today from WNAC.

The Boston High School Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Joseph Wagner, played "Pomp and Circumstance," by Elgar, as an opening number.

Dr. Thomas Gosling, national director of Junior Red Cross, spoke from Washington, introducing Under Secretary of State William Phillips.

Following a switch to Chicago, a Glee club from the Crane Technical High school sang, and Robert Gilchrist of the Harvard School for Boys, Chicago, spoke.

The final number of the program was given from Indianapolis by Shortridge High school orchestra.

At Lecture

A SOCIAL AUDIENCE attended the lecture of Mrs. Maisie Ward Sheed, of London, England, which was sponsored by the Guild of the Infant Saviour at the Copley Plaza. A speaker of rare charm and directness, Mrs. Sheed's discourse on "Catholic Action—A Map of Life" left her audience in a reflective mood. We noticed Mrs. M. L. Ryan, smartly gowned in Oxford gray, set off with silver fox furs. Mrs. Edward C. Donnelly, in tailored all black, Mrs. John A. Reardon Jr., in black modish suit and becoming beret, Mrs. Frederick L. O'Brien, in fashionable black and white. Mrs. William V. McDermott, president of the club, her black cloth gown relieved by a gold lame collar.

The guest of honor, Mrs. Sheed wore the new Russian turban with her black frock. Mrs. Norbert J. Reilly, was very fallian in piper's green and alpine hat. Mrs. Edward Goode, receiving at the door, youthful in black, with white collar and cuffs. Mrs. Timothy Murnane, very stunning, in a black coat and hat with luxurious aigrettes; Miss Catherine Donnelly in girlish suit of gray and krimmer and Anna Cuhn, very pretty in her dark green ensemble and matching hat. Rev. Father Barry, spiritual director, was a guest on the platform.

MISS COLETTE MURPHY of Dorchester is directing plans for the bridge and fashion show of the Alumnae Association of the Boston Academy of the Notre Dame to be held at the Copley-Plaza on Thursday evening, November 22.

MRS. NORBERT J. REILLY, above, was among those attending the lecture at the Copley-Plaza sponsored by the Guild of the Infant Saviour.

BLACK COAT ON RUSSIAN LINES WITH WHITE SKUNK TRIM IS DRAMATIC

Given in Marriage

—By ADELE GARRISON—

Avis is prevented from making a scene at the wedding ceremony but proceeds to fall into swoon as the ritual ends.

CHAPTER 187

WHATEVER AVIS ARLEN meant to do when she started up from her chair as the clergyman intoned the words, "If anyone can show just cause," in all probability will never be known since no one save Avis herself had any idea of her purpose in thus rising, and I do not believe she will ever reveal the motive behind her frustrated action.

For she never reached her feet and I do not think anyone else saw what happened. The eyes of everyone in the room, save the Underwoods, seated on the other side of the girl, and my self were watching the wedding ceremony. But I had kept a wary "half an eye" upon the treacherous girl, and Harry and Lillian Underwood had shared my vigil.

So it was that she had only half risen when Harry Underwood's powerful grip upon one arm, and Lillian's, not so strong but equally compelling, upon the other, had forced her back into her chair, and Lillian had murmured something into her ear which reduced her to instant quiescence.

THE CEREMONY ENDS

The beautiful old ritual swept on to its conclusion, Ronald produced the ring at just the right second; Mary handed her bouquet to Marion and held out her finger for its fitting, and Noel's "With this ring I thee wed," was sounded even louder than his "I do."

The bride and groom seemed to have exchanged personalities for the duration of the ceremony, at least Mary's brilliant, dashing assertiveness was nowhere in evidence, and her responses were almost faint, while Noel's gentleness appeared to have vanished. It was a strong, resolute and steadfast man who was making those responses.

Was it a frightened bride, a woman who suddenly was realizing the lifelong, never-ending responsibility to which she was committing her untrammelled spirit, who was saying those words? Was there a hint of, not regret, but of unconscious shrinking from the long unknown road in front of her feet, that made her answers so low?

MADGE'S DOUBTS

Again there came creeping over me the little chill of doubt that I had felt at intervals ever since the beginning of this beautiful romance of Mary's and Noel's.

Only a great, all-shielding love, sacrificial, reckoning nothing of self, could carry Mary to success in marriage. I felt that Noel's held that quality, although I sensed a jealous possessiveness in him that might spell trouble later on. But Mary could her present love for Noel possess that living spark which alone can keep alive a great love?

I remembered the unmistakable light which had come into her eyes at the thought of a year in Paris, even without Noel, as Philip Veritsen had planned for her. That involuntary expression had gone as quickly as it had come, and Mary had been insistent and apparently wholehearted in her decision to marry Noel, risking his father's displeasure and the withdrawal of his offer for her career.

AVIS SWOONS

Mary did not know that I had seen that light in her eyes, nor, I was sure, did she suspect that Noel also had seen it. But I wondered if, under her very real, exuberant happiness, there was not a tiny, gnawing doubt as to her ability to keep that happiness for herself and for her adoring young husband.

"I pronounce you man and wife."

The solemn voice of the Reverend Mr. Summers enunciated the final words of the ceremony slowly, distinctly, and I caught my breath in mingled triumph and apprehension.

"For better, for worse; in sickness and in health; till death do you part." Suddenly these seemed promises too tremendous for such young things to make.

The young ushers were removing the white ribbons now and the guests were rising to go forward and congratulate the newly wedded pair. As I rose from my own seat, I heard a slight choking sound, and saw Avis Arlen slump against Harry Underwood's arm in what appeared to be a swoon.

Short Wraps Worn

Of the shorter wraps, the one of cocolle influence seems to be of most importance early in the season. This fashion reached great prominence during the past summer season in both daytime and evening coats. Because of its free and easy swing, young things will adore it. They like the tiny, childish collar which is so becoming to them. And it is easy to wear over any dress because of its free cut. In this wrap, too, velvet is more important than the other fabrics, and no color can be too gay.

Double Collars Hem-Length Stoles

By Annice Brink

YOU ARE LOOKING for the unusual in a dress coat, madame. Mmmh. And you don't know what you mean by "unusual," but you definitely are not going to get silver fox on jacquard wool, or a sable-dyed kolinsky notched collar on a brown diagonal.

White skunk is a new high-fashion. Either entirely white or with just a hint of black, it is being used to trim black coats. They are especially dramatic when cut on Russian lines, and are a grateful change from the so-Russian curly lamb.

"BLONDE" FURS

Dark coats with blonde furs are often chosen by the woman who wishes to exact every bit of a fur's becoming potentiality as a frame for her face.

Stoles, muffling the neck to the chin and edging the front to the hem are important, and are smart either in a luxurious flat fur of the mink type, or of the black skunk marked in white. Often chinchilla-dyed lapin is used in this way.

There is nothing more regal or extravagant than a silver fox stole sweeping its way to the hem of your coat. But perhaps that is too unusual—from the standpoint of the bank balance—madame?

DOUBLE COLLARS

Collars that are over-size Peter Pan types, with points leaning toward the Puritan, are made really unusual by backing, or an undercollar of the coat's fabric. Or perhaps a double collar with a contrasting fur, in the case of a fur coat—black breitail with its self-collar complemented by an under-collar of silky white galyak.

Wine Matelasse Crepe Is Smartest

AN ENTICING fabric, matelasse crepe with its interesting puckered surface and in a plum-wine shade, is made into an all-day frock of much distinction. It cuts a dashing figure—with its fitted lines and intriguing wing-tip tie inspiration at the neckline, done in white silk poplin and black circ-effect bow. Withal, it belongs in the budget group.

Miss Molly Bowditch, daughter of Mrs. E. Sohier Welch of Louisburg square, is one of the beauties of the current debutante season. Extremely smart, she is tiny and ash-blonde. A clever trick is hers: posing in this frock, she combed down fluffy little feather bangs. But posing in evening attire, she swept the hair of her forehead. A subtle change in personality was brought about!

If you would like further details on the matelasse crepe frock shown, phone Annice Brink, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Two Envelopes For Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you kindly let me know the correct way to address the outside envelope which contains an invitation? I think the outside envelope should be addressed Mr. John Blank, and the others think it should be Mr. and Mrs. John Blank. What is correct? N.

For the wedding invitation contained in two envelopes, on the outer envelope is written the full name and address of the person or persons to whom the invitation is sent:

Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Blank
24 Withcombe Avenue
Haven
New York

On the inner envelope is written the full name of the recipient or recipients exactly as it appears on the outer envelope, but without the address.

Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Blank

For the invitation inclosed in only one envelope, the envelope is addressed to the person or persons to whom the invitation is sent:

Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Blank

"Mother Cannot Feed Us," Boy Tells Swap Editor

The swap Editor has no plea to make today. He is going to let the following letter from a boy of 15 do its own pleading:

"Dear Swap Editor:

"I am writing this in my room in school as my mamma wrote and received a little suit for my sister's little girl.

"My mother sure has one hard time. She is only getting $11 from the city and my dear Dad is in Heaven and we have to pay $4.50 for rent. We are 13 in the house. But my mother cannot feed us all.

"We are in rags. I have to wear overalls to school and they are in rags. My mother or sister washes my blouse for the next morning to go to school."

This little boy is 15. He has sisters aged five, seven, eight, nine, 16 and 19, brothers aged 23 and 13, and one sister has two babies.

A woman in Chelsea asks for clothes for boys 16, four and two. She also has daughters aged 14 and one.

A mother in Dorchester wishes dresses sizes 7, 6 and 2. She also requests trousers sizes 14, 13, 12 and 11.

One mother's child has already caught cold this early in the year from lack of warm clothing. He is nine years old, and is badly in need of clothing. The woman, herself, needs clothes size 48, and her husband needs clothes size 40.

A mother asks for a jacket for her son of eight, so he can keep warm. He wears size 2 shoes, and has but one pair. The same party asks for shoes size 12 for her girl of nine.

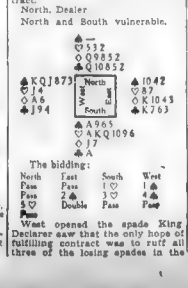
Manipulation of Entries

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The following deal was sent to me by Miss Rebecca C. Nail of Highlands, North Carolina. Miss Nail writes:

"This deal was played at the Highlands Country Club, where interest in Contract shares honors with golf. The golf course was made famous by our 'Bobby,' and while there are no outstanding Bridgers, they make up in numbers what they lack in rank. The declarer in this case can at least claim foresight, for it required careful planning to fulfill the contract."

North, Dealer
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♡	1♠
Pass	2♠	3♡	4♠
5♡	Double	Pass	Pass
Pass

West opened the spade King. Declarer saw that the only hope of fulfilling contract was to ruff all three of the losing spades in the South hand with the three small trumps in dummy. But how would South regain entry to continue the ruffs without interruption? Obviously through the club suit. There was thus a temptation to let the first spade ride to the South hand, making use of the spade entry and thus minimizing the number of club entries necessary. But after careful consideration, declarer decided that a greater risk lay in the possibility of East's over-ruffing the fourth round of spades, despite his spade asset.

Declarer therefore ruffed the opening lead in dummy, returned with the club Ace, led another spade for a ruff, returned with the club ruff, led the last small spade for a ruff, and returned with a second club ruff to draw the adverse trumps.

Tomorrow's Hand
West, dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Tired Tresses Gleam With New Highlights as Natural Oils Are Replenished

By the Beauty Editor

It's been a perfectly grand summer and fall, hasn't it, but if long lazy days in the sun, too frequent dips in the sea and overindulgence in finger waves baked by hot dryers, have left your hair streaked and hopeless, there's no time to be lost in hoping for miracles.

If you believe, as Irene Castle does, that every one of us can acquire charm—or whatever it is that all women seek and all men admire—then it is time we took stock of our beauty assets.

Let's reverse the usual order of things, and start at the top and work down. If you believe that the hair is more important than the hat and the head, you'll insist on soft, gleaming well-cared for tresses. Hair must be brushed thoroughly two or three times a week if you want it to gleam with highlights.

Begin by brushing the hair up in the back. Then go all around the head and brush from the hairline towards the centre of the head. Part the hair off in sections and brush each one vigorously. Keep the brushes clean. To wash, lather them in soap and water to which a teaspoonful of ammonia has been added. When they are dry have a washable bag to keep them in.

If you can have head massages done in a beauty shop where the manipulation ma...ipulate the water tap or exercise treatment so much the better. However the following is a very good head ... that can be done at home.

Place the thumbs in front of the ears with the fingers over the head and move the scalp with a rotary movement. Then place the thumbs on the hairline at the back of the head and hands over the top as before. Manipulate the scalp again with rotary movements. Use pressure and do the movement for five or ten minutes at a time.

Next place the tops of the fingers at the back of the neck and manipulate the spine vigorously with the same rotary movement's. Then place the fingertips on the forehead at the hairline and move the scalp in the same rotary movements.

If your hair is oily you'll need a good hair tonic for the particular condition of your scalp. If it is dry—and it seems by the mail I receive that more people have dry scalp and hair than have oily or normal—then you will want a dry hair tonic.

I have two excellent recipes which you make at home for both types of hair. These ... tions must be applied every night if your hair is to recapture its former loveliness and lustre.

To learn how to make these lotions for both oily and dry hair, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

One Dish Meal in Casserole

By MARTHA LEE

THE NICE THING about a casserole of meat is that it may be the whole dinner or lunch all in one dish. This one-dish combination has lots of advantages. It saves on dishes for one thing and that appeals to all of us. But it also gives such an excellent opportunity to use left-over meats or extend small amounts of meat to serve the whole family and to combine flavors which are just a little different from the usual pot roasts, chops or stews.

One other advantage which must not be overlooked is the ease with which such meats are kept hot. If the family is late to dinner or the lunch must be kept hot over two noon lunch hours, the covered glass, metal or crockery dish will retain a low even heat with no danger of burning.

Either fresh or left-over meat, ham, bacon or fresh or cured sausages combine equally well in the casserole combination. With them may be used cooked rice, noodles, spaghetti, bread or cracker crumbs, left-over potatoes or biscuit crust.

The one serving of tomatoes, corn, peas, etc., leftover from the day before may go into the mixture along with bits of green pepper and onion, chopped parsley or a little catsup for flavoring.

Some favorite combinations are spaghetti with cream sauce, corn peppers and chopped olives, lima beans with bacon and tomato, scalloped smoked sausages and potatoes, meat and vegetable pie with crisp biscuit crust. A casserole lined with cooked noodles or rice and filled with beaten egg and filled with a cut meat and cream sauce is an attractive dish and a tasty one.

HAM AND SQUASH CASSEROLE

½ Hubbard squash
½ pound cooked ham

Cut the raw peeled squash into small cubes about one inch in size. Cut the ham in a similar-size cubes. Mix the meat and squash cubes together in a casserole and bake 30 minutes at 400 deg. F., then uncover and continue the baking for another 20 minutes. No seasonings are needed.

Lenz, Favored in Bridge Play, Is Ousted

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 8.—Favored teams of four with one exception came through the qualifying round of the competition for the Harold S. Vanderbilt trophy last night. In the first semi-final round, to be played tonight, eight of the 16 remaining teams will be eliminated.

Eight teams were eliminated last night in the qualifying round. Top honors for the first day's play were made by the Four Aces team and a team led by H. Hilbert Bosworth, Jr., a member of their matches. The need team entered by Sidney Lenz was the only favored team eliminated.

A good score was made on the evening and by the team composed of H. Hilbert Bosworth, Jr., Oswald Jacoby, Paul and Theodore Lightner.

Through a double and redouble, Mrs. Ann Gorden made 670 points on a one diamond bid while one contract of three diamonds redoubled was one trick. To do it was a total card in the play of the hand.

At table No. 1 Goren was North; Bosworth was South; Paul Berrick J. Wehner of Deal, N. J., was West; Mrs. Anne Rosenfeld of Cleveland was East.

At table No. 2 E. Melvin Goddard of Deal, N. J. was North; Mrs. Harold Steiner of Deal was South; Rau was West, and Lochridge was East.

Neither side was vulnerable, and East was dealer.

The bidding at the Boscowitz table was: East, pass; South, one diamond; West, double; North redouble; East, pass; South, pass; West, pass. At the other table, the North-South combination reached three diamonds.

Bosworth took five tricks and two honors and one club trick. After clearing the diamonds which were opened originally by Bosworth's partner, the heart finesse, but West topped the queen with the king; dummy's ace ruffed; Bosworth led the spade two; East's seven holding. East returned the club two, West having the jack and dummy the ace. Dummy led another spade, East's jack capturing. Here the club 10 proved to be the key card. East's failure to lead the card costing a club trick, as South permitted the club eight to ride to dummy's nine, taking West's king and making his own queen good.

Lead of the club ten set the contract at the other table.

Shampoo For Child's Hair

Question: My little girl, two and a half years old, had lovely hair until I used a shampoo which proved to be very disappointing. Her hair is now straight and very dry, where it used to be soft and silky. Could you tell me of a good shampoo for a child's head?

Mrs. Anne M., Witham.

Answer: Since a child's head is very tender and sensitive, only but the best of shampoos and conditioners should be used. There is a shampoo especially prepared for children's hair which is made by a famous scalp specialist and which may help in restoring your little ... hair to its former lustre. If you will kindly send a stamped, self addressed envelope to the department, the name of the shampoo will be forwarded to you.

Workers Lost Liberty Under Fascism

Employes and employers in Fascist Italy have lost their liberties, but they have gained a measure of security, H. R. Knickerbocker, noted foreign correspondent of International News Service, discloses in the sixteenth article of his series, "Democracy Versus Dictatorship."

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Rome, Nov. 8—Italian workmen have lost their liberties under Fascism. They have not only lost their liberties as workmen.

They have lost in wages under Fascism in the world economic crisis. But the crisis hit wages everywhere.

They have one gain. They have gained in security under Fascism.

Italian employers have lost their liberties under Fascism. They have lost their liberties as citizens, and their liberties as employers.

They have lost in profits under Fascism in the world economic crisis. But the crisis hit profits everywhere.

SECURITY GAINED

They have one gain. Employers have gained in security under Fascism not as capitalists, however, but only as managers.

Capital and labor have lost under Fascism in the crisis, but labor has lost less than capital. Primarily the state has gained from the loss of both and that is the sense of Fascism.

The gain to the state has been paid for by the loss of the liberty of its citizens. The gain to the individual has been for both workman and employer to a certain degree of security against unemployment.

In casting up the profit and loss account of Fascism for workmen and their employers, the first big item to establish on the debit side is the complete loss of all their liberties. Both, of course, have lost their franchises, that is, the right to vote, the right to choose their governors, and make their laws and fix their taxes. This they have lost as citizens.

Workmen have lost far more. They have lost their right to employ the only weapon workmen have to support their demands, namely the right to quit work collectively, the right to strike.

STRIKE LAW PASSED

It took four years of Fascism to lead up to the law against strikes, passed April 3, 1926.

Finally Italian workmen have lost the right to organize in their own trade unions. Their existing unions were broken up by force. All Italian workmen today are represented by the Fascist labor syndicates.

Furthermore all employers were compelled to take new employes from the official labor exchanges, and preferences for jobs was by law accorded to sign members to the Fascist labor syndicates. Thus the pressure to join was enormous. Italian capitalists were pleased at first.

WORKINGMAN FAVORED

They discovered more and more until today they are thoroughly cognizant of the fact that Fascism did not deliver labor into their hands, but that Fascism delivered both labor and capital into the hands of a supposedly impartial man who believes that capital ought to be preserved for the sake of labor, but whose sympathies are on the side of the workingman.

Employers arrived at this conclusion after some years had passed and today, tabulating their position, find that in practice if not [illegible] in law:

First, they cannot [illegible] new factories or expand old ones without permission.

Second, they cannot reduce wages without government permission.

Third, they cannot open new factories or expand old ones without permission.

BOSTON AMERICAN
NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER
BOSTON, THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1934

This Is Life
by ROBERT E. ROGERS

It was Louis H. Bourbon, was it not? of 16 Versailles street, Paris, France, who stuttered on a famous occasion, "But this— this is rebellion!"

And his aide answered gently: "Nay, sire, it is revolution."

I suspect that Tuesday marked the end of an era in a way even more striking than November, 1932.

Robert E. Rogers

The election of Roosevelt was an overwhelming expression of uncertainty and disappointment, which took it out, as it always does, on their incumbent.

But although it is generally taken for granted that the administration always loses strength in a mid-term election, Tuesday showed the administration functioning with a kind of steam-roller power which even its staunchest supporters had not altogether counted upon.

On Tuesday a great many millions of people, having experienced various phases of the New Deal, chose deliberately to affirm it—chose, equally deliberately, to exclude the Republican party from the job of making our civilization over.

Not that they accused the G. O. P. of deliberate sabotage, but, rather, of a certain inelasticity of mind which keeps it from adjusting its old ways of thinking to new conditions.

The orthodox capitalistic individualism is hardly a breeder of heresies and one must have much of the heretic in one to change the habits of thought of a lifetime and embrace the New Deal with all its implications.

Class Consciousness

In Massachusetts, particularly, Tuesday marks the end of an era. For the first time in my memory party lines have been obliterated and the election turned on a philosophy and a personality. The personality had to be powerful and creative. The philosophy says that no financial or business system is adequate unless the results of its activities take care of all the people in the commonwealth instead of the few.

The vote Tuesday meant that the people definitely have lost confidence in the local business and financial world and wish government to be carried on in terms of human rights rather than property rights.

The rank-and file Democrat is likely to say that "this marks the end of the Highbrows on the Hill." I have heard it said. He doesn't quite mean that, for Republican politics has never been marked by excessive intellectual distinction.

When it comes to being highbrow the Brain trusters could give the Republican crowd a head start and win easily. What your rank-and-file Democrat does mean is that that complex of considerable money (whether inherited or inherited), old Yankee stock, secure social position, university education, and so on, is on its way out.

He has always hoped for it. Now he sees it definitely come to pass. Much of the wild enthusiasm one saw downtown Tuesday was the expression of the thought which several people expressed to me—that now the man in the street will have an administration of his own in the State Houses. Now he is going to be represented.

That, I take it, is what the returns mean all over the country and the man in the street is quite definitely conscious of it. America has always said that there is no class consciousness here. The European theorists have always said that it is not possible to do without consciousness, once that you get down to the fundamentals of politics!

I am very much inclined to believe that this election of 1934 was a class consciousness election particularly in Massachusetts, and that the results show that the real power has passed out of the hands of one class into that of another.

Stupid Psychology

For years the Boston political leaders among the Democrats—men like Curley and John F. Fitzgerald and others—have pointed out how limited were the opportunities of young men not of Yankee stock to get into the better banks and trust companies and law firms in capacities that promised promotion and eventual power.

For years a small number of younger and more wide-awake Republicans have complained that the Republicans were cutting their

'HAL GRAND BUT WE WEREN'T SUITED'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 8—Platinum-haired Jean Harlow is getting ready to sue Hal Rosson, her cameraman-husband, for divorce.

Jean says she has waited in vain for Rosson to send her some definite word from Europe, because she hoped to do him the courtesy of telling him of her divorce plans before she starts her action in the Los Angeles courts.

She and Rosson separated on May 6, six months ago. Shortly afterward he was taken sick with infantile paralysis.

"I couldn't file suit for a divorce from Hal when he was sick," said Jean today when she told me that within a month she hoped to start her suit for a final separation. "I talked with him every day, sent him books, and he agreed to see me and settle our affairs as soon as he was able—but I didn't hear from him until he called me long distance from New York. Imagine my surprise when he said he was sailing for Europe."

Jean says he told her that he was going to Europe for three weeks to recuperate from his illness and that when he returned they could discuss any plans she might have to dissolve their marriage.

Just Weren't Suited

Four months have elapsed. Rosson has been working for a British concern, but Jean says she cannot get a word from him as to when he expects to return to Hollywood. Friends of his who saw him in London have told her that Rosson expects to remain abroad indefinitely. Jean said:

"You see, it puts me in such an anomalous position. I am not living with my husband and there is no chance of a reconciliation. Hal is a fine person, but we just weren't suited. I do want to clear up matters.

"I should have preferred to have let him know my plans, but since I cannot get in touch with him I am going ahead with my divorce suit."

WAR A SPORT?
Tech Men Strike at Officer's Remark

War may be a sport in the opinion of army officers, but students at M. I. T. don't agree.

When an officer in charge of an R. O. T. C. class at the Institute remarked that "War is the most highly competitive sport," students in the class voiced their disapproval audibly, according to The Tech, undergraduate newspaper.

In an emphatic editorial, The Tech said:

"This paper feels that the state of mind which leads to outspoken disagreement with the statement that war is a sport indicates a healthy and safe attitude for the nation."

HARVARD ACCENT?
College to Determine Cause

Now, as to this Harvard accent and whether it comes with birth or is slipped on like an old-fashioned nightie over the head—well, Harvard is going to settle matters for all time.

The university will collect data on dialects brought to college from the various sections of the country by youths with an urge for learning, and also data on how soon it takes for the Harvard veneer to cover the sturdy oak of pronunciation.

The idea is that of Professor C. Packard, Jr., assistant professor of public speaking at Harvard.

Every member of the freshman class will have a recording made of his voice.

Before the lads are graduated, three years from next June, another recording of their voices will be made, and the two records compared as to accents and pronunciations.

There are 1054 students in the present freshman class and 1054 records can be a lot of noise.

You can just bet it wouldn't have been hard for the Animal Rescue League and the Boston Evening American to have found a home and a new master for this upstanding, bright eyed Irish terrier pup. He was picked up by the Milton police, but, before all the folks who wanted him had settled the argument as to who should get him, his real owner, worried to death over fear that he was lost, had traced him to the Carver street kennels and had telephoned he was coming for him. Everybody at the Animal Rescue League is going to miss him, including Miss Evelyn Edgar of the League staff, who is shown holding him. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Not Guilty
CHANGES ATTIRE FROM MEN'S CLOTHING

Panope Kendall, girl in man's clothes who mystified police and attaches of municipal court for four weeks, was revealed today as Miss Panope Kennedy, student of a Chicago business school.

Miss Kennedy was returned to Municipal Court from the Psychopathic Hospital, where she had been sent when she refused to reveal her identity and the reason she appeared in Boston attired in boy's clothing.

When the girl came into court this morning her attire of men's clothing had been replaced by the conventional clothing of a young woman, excepting for her shoes. She still had on men's shoes.

She had a light colored gingham dress that had been retrieved from the moth balls in the Psychopathic Hospital. Her black silk stockings had been purchased by probation department officials while other bits of clothing were gathered from generous donors, friends or employes of the probation department.

Today a letter from Chicago was shown Judge Elijah Adlow that convinced him the mystery girl was from that city.

Then came the knottiest problem for the court to untangle.

The girl was charged with vagrancy. She pleaded guilty to vagrancy, but Judge Adlow said he could not place her on probation because he did not believe her a vagrant in spite of the guilty plea.

Neither did the girl want probation. She said probation would give her a criminal record—and would place her under supervision of probation officers.

After a conference at the bench the girl changed her plea to not guilty and was found not guilty. Then she voluntarily accepted aid in a home in Rutland street, South End.

FIRST, LAST

Danbury, Conn., Nov. 8—Mrs. Matilda Basten Sturdevant, 88, who in 1894 gained nation-wide fame as one of the first women to hold public office in this country, is dead in the home of her son, Elijah Sturdevant, here following a long illness.

She was appointed city weigher of East Danbury for one term. No other woman has ever held the post.

Conscience Leads to Jail; Youth Wins Winter 'Rest'

BURGLARY CONFESSIONS MAY KEEP HIM THERE LONGER

The conscience of Daniel J. McCarthy, 25-year-old wanderer, sent him to the House of Correction today for three months, and if his conscience needs any further easing he may draw more yet.

McCarthy, who walked into Somerville police headquarters last night and said he wished to confess some burglaries as far back as two years, pleaded guilty in Somerville court today to charges of breaking and entering in the nighttime and larceny.

He was held in $10 000 for the grand jury, but on an old default warrant which police were able to find in the many files he got his wish to be sent away immediately and was given the three months for violation of parole.

McCarthy walked into Somerville police headquarters and said:

"I suppose you're looking for me?"

Inspector Allan S. Burns looked over the well-built, curly-haired young man and surmised that he wasn't looking for him, just at him. McCarthy went on:

"Well, I'll tell you about some housebreaks. You see my conscience has been bothering me. While I usually sleep on the Boston Common, winter's coming on. And——"

Inspector Burns said that McCarthy proceeded to tell him about burglarizing a Mt. Vernon street, East Somerville, apartment for a watch, a flashlight and $5 in cash. That was in July of last year. The story checked with police records.

Then there was a $9 break in Florence street, also East Somerville. And several more . .

While the police were still getting surprised, McCarthy advised cleaning up Boston Common. There are a lot of "bad men" there, he told them.

'Blacksmith Blasts' Out Birthday

By Associated Press

St. Thomas, Ont., Nov. 8—William "Billy" Rippon, blacksmith, observed his 82d birthday with an "anvil salute."

After the second blast, Fire Chief Mitrella decided the performance constituted a menace to property, and the salute ended.

By AUSTEN LAKE

I THINK THE TROUBLE with Harvard football, if failure to win games is trouble as some people know it, traces to the fact that Harvard men are only spare-time football players who do not dream nice dreams about the fat, big-time coaching jobs that might be theirs on graduation.

Austen Lake

The spare-time football player contrasts with the career football player who comes out of the coaching mills, where a shaggy farm boy may loaf through a four-year course in furnace mending or train calling without distracting his mind from the vital purpose of football.

One of the entertaining folk tales at Cambridge relates how Harry Grayson, the midwest sports author and uncle of Bobby Grayson, the Stanford line basher and fancy stepper, first peddled the lad to Harvard. The elder Grayson told the athletic dean what a swell bargain he had, if only a suitable job like bathing restaurant dishes or tidying cellars could be wangled. Bobby had the cash for tuition.

But Harvard's jobs were occupied at the moment by needy scholars, and young Grayson was allowed to drift Westward Ho! to Stanford, where jobs were plentiful for athletes with size 17 collars, fence post legs and washboard stomachs. And there, today, he is making history.

I mention this to show that either a college is in the football business as a commercial enterprise to exploit the sufferings and enthusiasms of the young, or as a normal outlet for young animal emotions and a source of innocent merriment, which I think is the Harvard ideal.

HAVING OFTEN PORTRAYED A college coach as a bony unfortunate who screams in his sleep and suffers from acid stomach and the galloping shakes, I do not see how I can logically join a crusade to get Eddie Casey's job.

Casey is an honest, sincere chap who knows more scientific football than the late Percy Haughton ever knew, but who cannot crack funny jokes or give off emotional outbursts in the profane manner of a cowman and who was never blessed with Haughton's cbel-heaver, freight lifting type of material.

Being a mild, courteous man with a horror of being looked at, Casey may be handicapped in his dealing with kids, who expect a coach to act like a combination mountain preacher and third-rate actor, gifted in the arts of wild man tantrums and theatrical quips.

The major league baseball people are more candid than the college people in saying why they are deposing a manager, who has failed to win because he lacked sluggers who could slug, and pitchers who could pitch. And they confess simply, "Well, for the sake of customer appeal, and the gate, any change is for the better."

I would say that as long as Harvard and other colleges who operate their football straight-forwardly and above the table, follow the policy of waiting for schoolboy beeves and husgies to drift in, perhaps praying, "Please, God, send us a couple of big tackles," they cannot expect to overpower opposing teams who herd their material in on the hoof.

Until a year ago, Ford Frick, the new National League president, was a paragrapher on the New York Journal, a solemn young man with a black mane and a high-pitched voice. His were the drab ambitions of the average newsman with a limited horizon, a picker-upper of odd opportunities to swell his income and sooth his worries over money troubles.

And then from a clear sky came the job of National League publicity man, an obscure post in which a man worked leisurely for $12,500 a year, traveled widel yand greeted the rural press. Ford, always genial, well-liked by his colleagues, never dreamed that in a short 12 months he would hold the highest post in his league, carrying a $25,000 honorarium.

Frick is a studious type, lean, gentle and persuasive, who always haunted the press boxes in the Southern training with a book under his elbow—real hard books too, like David Copperfield and Les Miserables, not the paper back drug store kind.

THE TAP OF THE CARPENTER'S hammer, laying the dog track, will not be heard in the Boston Garden until early April of next year. The new dog racing law does not permit the weasel hounds to scud their cigar-shaped bellies and toothpick legs around the oval until then.

George V. Brown, the Garden boss, tells me that a small army of dog men and women have been storming his office, fairly slavering in their eagerness to get a cut, a sliver or only a shaving of the racing concession. George, a rubicund gent who might have stepped out of an old English hunting print, tut-tuts the dog prospect, saying, "Why, we aren't even giving it a thought. We might not even get a franchise." Which is strictly heh-heh.

The Garden will get its franchise and a big share of the 200 racing days allowed by law. And the betting public will get a headache and, ultimately, a bank roll as thin as a poorhouse mouse.

THE BRONZE PALM OR GILT sunburst for the most neatly performed play this season, goes to Tufts—commonly termed "little" Tufts, though it could beat several major college elevens of my knowledge.

Tufts' quick kick, a lightning punt from close formation, is one of the sights of the gridiron as Roger Keith does it.

With a scant second to get the ball off before incoming tackles and ends flatten him, Keith gets 50 yards consistently, and catching the opposing safety man upfield, adds from 20 to 30 yards of roll.

Lon Manly, the coach, and a silent type who lacks talent for self exploitation, has the outstanding N. E. small college record for his five years, 24 wins, 7 losses (including 3 to Brown) and 4 ties.

Tufts men who wept after Arthur Sampson became Tufts' Messe who led the college out of the wilderness, dried their tears long ago.

High Kickers of Tufts Who Help Keep Jumbos in Ranks of Unbeaten

DICK HINGSTON — CAPTAIN WALT FROEHLICH — ROGER KEITH — RAYMIE MacLEAN

Here are four good reasons why Lew Manly's Tufts College team sits high atop the pinnacle of the Eastern football heavens, alone, undefeated, untied and unscored upon. They are all exceptional punters. Hingston, brother of Manly's backfield coach, is a blocking back of the finest. Froehlich and MacLean need never apologize for their ball carrying. While Keith, a sophomore, has been a constant joy to the Jumbos. He specializes in quick kicks, forward passes, departments in which Tufts was particularly weak a year ago. Middlebury, Tufts' Foe, High Scoring Eleven

By Walter Kiley

Holy Cross attempts to get back in the good graces of its Purple following at the expense of Manhattan at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, on Saturday.

Boston College waits until the holiday, Monday, for its annual battle with Centre. Undefeated Northeastern travels to Amherst for the objective Mass. State game Boston University's idle.

So, with the exception of the Harvard-Navy game at the Stadium, Lew Manly and his Tufts College Jumbos meet no rival opposition as they seek their seventh straight victory with Middlebury at Tufts Oval.

From the way that Captain Walter Froehlich and his mates have been going along as yet untied or scored upon, Middlebury seem only stands little chance to knock the Jumbos from its lofty perch.

Naturally Manly is primarily interested in winning. Naturally enough, too, he would like to see his Medford team pets its unyard line and three times held Williams even closer to the goal, will, undoubtedly, meet a greater test than in the other games.

Northeastern's hopes of going through the season received a bitter blow with the death of Ray Pelletier.

The Salem back, one of the finest athletes in the school, will be sadly missed.

The Huskies, from Coach Al McCoy down, were nearly prostrate from the news.

McCoy, himself, had a special attachment to the boy. Ever since he was first taken to the hospital with one specialist after another unable to diagnose the case, McCoy has made his daily rounds enshrouded in gloom.

Just whether or not the misfortune will put a serious crimp in Northeastern football, time alone will tell.

In the meanwhile, Holy Cross starts afresh. It has lost its victories of going through undefeated. It finds its solace in the anticipation of establishing a record for Holy Cross football, namely in beating Harvard, Brown and Boston College all in the one year.

Last year it won from the Crimson and the Bear. Along came a short and Boston College team to shatter its dreams. The year before it lost to both Harvard and Brown and was tied by the Eagles.

Bob Daughters of Watertown finals to find value rewarded and is to start at left end. Rex Kidd, another Monroe f ond is to get his chance at quarterback and Len Kuzma, another sophomore, will start at fullback.

Army3-1Choice Over Harvard

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 8—Army, Purdue, Minnesota, Pittsburgh, Stanford and Yale are quoted as favorites to win their football games Saturday according to quotations announced today by New York betting commissioners.

The Cadets are quoted at 3 to 1 over Harvard Purdue at 3 to 5 over Iowa; Minnesota at 4 to 1 over Indiana; Pittsburgh at 5 to 2 over Nebraska; Stanford at 2 to 1 over Washington, and Yale at 8 to 5 over Georgia.

Colgate is favored at 8 to 5 over Tulane; Columbia at 3 to 1 over Brown; Illinois at 5 to 2 over Northwestern; So. Methodist at 2 to 1 over Texas A. & M.; Ohio State at 5 to 2 over Chicago and St. Mary's at 3 to 2 over U. C. L. A.

BRUINS TO OPEN AT TORONTO TONIGHT

Hockey, the most popular of winter sports returns tonight as the 1934-35 season of the National Hockey League opens in St Louis and in Toronto.

In St. Louis the world champion Chicago Black Hawks will tune up the Eagles, while in Toronto the Boston Bruins tackle the Leafs.

One of the most interesting of experiments starts tonight in St Louis.

The St Louis Eagles were formerly the Ottawa Senators. Now under the management of Eddie Gerard, they will try to recapture the lost hockey prestige and also the financial backing they didn't get in Ottawa.

The Arena in which the Eagles will play their home games is said to be the best in the loop, even outdoing Madison Square Garden and the Toronto Maple Leaf Gardens.

The Bruins when they open against the Leafs will be under the managements of Frank Patrick brother of Lester, who coaches the New York Rangers.

League rules this season are changed but little from last year. The principal departure being the insertion of a free penalty shot.

This penalty is called on a player who trips a member of the offensive team who is obviously in on the goalie

'Gambling Must Cease, or Else'—Warner

By Universal Service

Philadelphia, Nov. 8—Glenn (Pop) Warner, coach of the Temple University football team, today agreed with Bill Alexander, gridiron coach of Georgia Tech., that gambling on collegiate football games must cease to stop the game from going the way of boxing, pro baseball and wrestling.

Warner, a member of the All-American board, with Alexander, declared he thought "all well-wishers of the game would like to see the elimination of betting on college football."

He said:

"I can't recall any instance where such betting among the alumni or spectators affected what actually took place on the playing field, but I am firmly convinced the practice should be halted.

"I can't remember a single instance where gambling one way or another caused the college players to lie down.

"There is no doubt in my mind that such gambling does, however, cause much of the hard feeling between the alumni and students of various colleges meet on the gridiron.

"Such betting often places the coach in an uncomfortable position. Many times a member of the alumni who has bet heavily and lost, places the blame on the coach of his team, thinking he should have had a winner."

Warner said he had never given much thought to how the practice might be curtailed. He said:

"An appeal to the alumni and students of a college might help considerably.

"Of course that wouldn't prevent the average spectator of a game from placing a wager. But at least the alumni and students would be setting a good example."

WARNS EAGLES TO BE READY FOR FIGHT

New Monday afternoon a Boston College eleven that has refound its fight and winning drive will stack up against those colorful "Praying Colonels" from Centre College, Danville, Ky.

Coach Joe McKenney has just received a letter from Frank Murray head coach at Marquette, formerly an annual rival of B. C. Frank is a warm friend of Joe's, and, in so much as Marquette played Centre two weeks ago, Murray sent on word as to what to expect on the holiday.

"Centre has without doubt the biggest, most durable bunch of players we faced all season," writes Murray. "Fast, well built and in great condition, they are getting better every game.

"On the defense they have one of the most adamant lines we have ever faced. If anything, their line is over aggressive.

"I do not hesitate to rate them ahead of Michigan State, which we played last Saturday."

The full import of Murray's words are realized when one looks at the record of Michigan State which he rates as inferior to the Colonels.

To date the Staters are undefeated in five starts, scoring 114 points to 27 for their opponents, three of them were shut outs.

Grinnell, Michigan, Carnegie Tech, Manhattan and Murray's own club, Marquette, have been overwhelmed, and this Saturday the selectors are picking State to down the undefeated Syracuse eleven.

Joe McKenney claims that Center will give his team the hardest game of the entire season. The Eagles have played some pretty tough contests thus far, and still have a little argument to settle with Holy Cross on December 1.

News like the above indicates that Monday's game with Center will be a whizz-bang.

WIN OVER YALE SAVED CASEY

slammed the door, pulled back a bench, put his feet on a desk, moved around whenever he felt the desire, and remained for the full lecture.

"You seemed uneasy and restless during the lecture," said the good professor, "Didn't you like it?"

"No, I didnt care for it at all," he answered gruffly.

"You seemed to distract the attention of the class, too," said the lecturer, smoothly. "It was quite embarrassing."

"Yah," snapped McEwan. "Well, now you know how I feel when everybody and his first cousin comes out to my practices.

"Your schoolroom is here. Mine is out there on the field. You stay out of my schoolroom, and I'll stay out of yours."

Casey, though, is not that type. He took charge last year in time to win the Yale game. He may do so again this year, though his hands seem to be tied tightly.

He does not appoint his own assistant coaches. He has nothing to do with the junior varsity or freshmen coaching staffs.

He does not even appoint the scouts. This year, he insisted that Billy Murray scout the Yale team and he won his point. Yale will be the most thoroughly scouted team against which the Crimson will play this season.

How about Dartmouth and Princeton? Were they well scouted? How about the Army, which comes to the Stadium next Saturday? Are they well scouted?

(Tomorrow, Dave Egan will make a few more pertinent remarks about the conditions of Harvard football.)

Brighton Picks Up as Line Clicks

Team Confident as It Faces Hyde Park at Fens

By Bill Connell

They'll tell you that a team is no better than its line, and the season of Brighton High this season proves the latter axiom.

Tom Scanlon, tall and taciturn coach of Brighton, this September had three veteran backs and a couple of others of experience. Only two seasoned linemen were on hand and one of these speedily cracked up.

Thus did Brighton bow to Commerce in the opener, and barely edge Memorial in the next chapter. The backs were doing nicely, but the line was not. Then the toil of Coach Scanlon began to tell, the line improved, and the team made an excellent showing from then on.

HICKMAN HEAD MAN

Brighton was very confident today as it prepared for its game of this afternoon in half the Fenway twin bill against Hyde Park, strong district schools crown pretender.

Captain and Quarterback Jim Hickman heads the backfield for Brighton. Weighing 150 pounds, he is one of the few rugged, line-crashin type of backs seen this season of light and shifty ball carriers. Calls his plays better than most game too.

Walter "Moose" Koechen, left half, 175. Emilio Pesca, 145, ace defensive and blocking back; and Ed Gincauskas, 170, at full complete the backfield. With Koechen, Pesca and Captain Hickman, veterans there's a lot of strength in that group.

PLENTY OF SPARES

Warren Kevorkian, veteran end or guard and a first class worker, has been out of action most of the time because of an [illegible] hired knee. Otherwise he would have braced [illegible] season.

There are plenty of subs [illegible] Joe Minsky, John Crow, [illegible] Kadzis, Sherwin Blood, Joe Centola, Vernon Greene, John Damiano and Jim Doherty, ends; John Horan [illegible] Dave Andrews and John Maultae, tackles; Ed Mayers, William Scott, William Yelmokos, Fred Caples, Gerard Kessler, guards; John O'Brien and Bill Horan centers.

George Kidik, quarter; Bernie Pallas, Paul Barley, Armando De Matteo, Frank Shea, Foster Cushing, Arnold Huberman and Lawrence Centola, halfbacks.

Manager Jimmy Etmekjian and Mel Goldsmith, his aide, have a real job to keep track of all this large group and its equipment.

Charlestown and Jamaica Plain games are ahead for Brighton after today's meeting with Hyde Park. And, regardless of the Hyde Park result, Brighton is counting on victories in the final two games, to wind up the grind in impressive fashion.

FEATHERS SAID TO OUTRANK BATTLES

By Dave Egan

Last year, the Boston Redskins defeated the football champions of the world, the Chicago Bears, 10-0, at Fenway Park, when Jim Musick took charge of the game and scored all 10 points.

Next Sunday afternoon at Fenway Park, they will endeavor to pin the first defeat of the season on the same Chicago Bears, as Cliff Battles, prize ball-carrier of the Redskins, and Beattie Feathers of the Bears lock horns in a spectacular personal feud.

For two years Battles has been the marvel of professional football with his thrilling runbacks, and sweeps and off tackle smashes. As a tribute to his ball-toting genius, the champion Bears made special arrangements to take him with them on their barn-storming tour of the nation after capturing their second world's title and again he proved unstoppable.

This season, though the most marked man in the gridiron game, Battles has been spectacular. He has averaged seven yards every time he has taken the pigskin.

Last Sunday, against the Green Bay Packers on a bogged gridiron and in a driving rain, he put on the finest exhibition of individual ball-carrying ever seen in this city.

Yet there are scores of reliable critics, among them the unprejudiced players of visiting teams, who acclaim Beattie Feathers, the first year man from Tennessee, the superior of Battles.

Physically powerful, possessing a driving pair of legs, a knifing straight-arm, change of pace, and fleet as a deer, Feathers has everything a great back should own. In eight games he has gained 835 yards, more than 10 yards a run, and smashed Battles' supposedly unapproachable 1933 record before the season was three-fourths completed.

Whether the Redskins can stop him is something that will be discovered Sunday afternoon.

CUBS DEFEATED BY QUEBEC

Quebec, Nov. 8—Boston Bruins Cubs were batting for exactly .000 today after their Canadian-American Hockey League inaugural with the Quebec Beavers. The junior Bruins came out on the short end of a 4-1 argument.

They started all right. Bessler, a new man, scored for the Cubs six minutes after the first faceoff. But then they were done.

Ranger equalized four minutes later and Runge put the Beavers ahead before the period closed.

Mondou scored in the second period and Lowery in the third to cement the decision for the Beavers.

Kaydet Squad Due Here Tonight

The Army Squad of 35 players will arrive at the Auburndale Railroad Station about 9 p. m. tonight. The players and three managers accompanying the squad will go immediately to the Belmont Springs Country Club.

Two New England cadets are members of the squad, both from the Bay State. They are Cadet Creighton W. Abrams of Feeding Hills (near Springfield) and J. H. Daly, both members of the 2dClass Cadet Armies' plays guard.

Lieutenant M. P. Echols, who is public relations officer at the Military Academy, will accompany the squad here. He will open West Point headquarters at the University Club about 9:30 p. m. tonight (Thursday).

Major Roscoe B. Woodruff, infantry, of the West Point tactical staff, is in charge of arrangements for the visit of the corps of cadets here.

Meanwhile, the long-eared mule, mascot of the Army squad, has taken a march and already has arrived in New England.

Fight Results

By Associated Press

Manele, Ind.—Al Ayers, Ky., 138½, Evansboro, O., won from Stonewall Jackson, 133, Cincinnati, (10).

Oakland, Cal.—Leo Kelly, 178, Los Angeles, knocked out Pietro Corsini, 175, Buffalo, N. Y. (4); Billy Reynolds, 134, Modesto, Cal., knocked out Johnny Pierson, 141, Dayton, O. (1).

Halifax, N. S.—Terrence Warrington, 175, Liverpool, N. S., Negro, knocked out Reg Miesseni, 186, Stockton, Mass., in sixth round of scheduled ten. It was Warrington's 11th straight victory, 12 of which he has won by knockouts.

Barcelona, Spain—Jose Gomez, Spanish featherweight, forced [illegible] second time to withdraw from fight with Freddie Miller, Cincinnati, U. S. A., [illegible] because of tumor in arm.

JACK WELLER OUT WITH BAD ANKLE

By Associated Press

Milwaukee—"Tarzan" Taylor, the Marquette University line coach, has always maintained that Pittmen have more brains than backs. He may be right, but he's having a hard time living down the fact that one of his forwards donned shirt, coat and hat the other night to go on a date and he was almost outdoors before he realized he didn't have on his pants.

West Point—The Army football players don't care whether it rains Saturday when they meet Harvard at Cambridge, or if they have to play on a muddy field. They're used to those conditions. The Cadets have neither practised nor played on a dry field in 10 days.

Princeton—Injuries which have followed Princeton teams since the opening of the season, have caught up with Jack Weller, the Tiger's regular left guard, and he may be lost to the team for two weeks. Weller sprained his right ankle during a scrimmage between the varsity and third teams yesterday.

Madison Wis.—"Now if you can do that Saturday, everything will be okay," Coach Clarence Spears told his Wisconsin players after the Badger varsity stopped some of Michigan's trick plays in practice.

TROJANS SIGN ANOTHER STAR

By Bob Ahearn

Owner Anthony Alving and Manager Sam Snyder of the Boston Trojans are spending money and plenty of it to give Boston a contender in the American Professional Basketball League.

Nat Hickey, the outstanding player on the Original Celtics, will sport the colors of the local quintet, it was announced today. The five foot, eleven-inch Irishman should provide plenty of offensive punch and will be welcomed by Coach Eddie Morley.

Tomorrow the pros will engage the M. I. T. varsity hoopsters in a practice game at the Tech Hangar. The season's opener will be with New York Jewels at the Arena next Monday.

It will be the first game of the season for both Hickey and Gilchrist, when these rivals square off in a prelim to the pros' debut.

"So as to give every fan a chance to see our games at popular prices, I'll put 4,000 reserved seats on sale at fifty cents," stated President Alving today.

Two local lads will be the main cogs in the defensive plans for the Trojans, Henry Kiley of East Boston and Sam Shapiro, Lynn, guards, have gone over with a bang. Shapiro formerly played for Providence College.

Huey Long Proves Senate Ideal Training Ground for Cheer Leaders

By Bill Corum

New York, Nov. 8.—Senator Huey Long's new job as head cheer leader for the Louisiana State University football team opens up interesting possibilities for the gentlemen who finished second at the polls on Tuesday. Of whom, I might add, there appears to be a considerable number.

Senator Long's success as a gridiron politico address system makes it look as though there is no finer training ground for cheer leaders than the United States Senate.

And if Huey, in one session, could put L. S. U. on the football map, think what Upton Sinclair might do for Southern California.

In fact, Upton seems to be just the sort of dogged never-say-die individual that the Southern Cal team needs this fall.

No sooner had the voters of California kicked Upton down the steps than epsom himself up and started sounding off again. Here is your cheer leader who never knows when he is licked.

I must confess that it sounded a trifle strange at first to hear Huey cheering for somebody besides Long. But this is a strange football season. Upsets are occurring every minute.

In addition I'm told that "the Long yell for Long" is Huey's favorite at all the L. S. U. cheers.

This is a modest version of the old locomotive yell called "The Senator." As nearly as I can recall it goes something like this:

Rah, Rah, Rah,
Rah, Rah, Rah,
Huey Long, Huey Long,
Rah, Rah, Rah,
What a man!
What a man!
Rah, Rah, Rah,
Rah, Rah Rah
Huey Long, Huey Long,
Team, Team, Team,
and
Huey Long!

"THEY CAN'T HURT US"

Whether the senator wrote this yell himself I have no way of knowing. But somehow to me it has the indefinable air and indistinct Long touch.

It does not come within the province of this bureau to discuss the capabilities of the self-styled Kingfish as a lawmaker and giver, of even as a politician.

But having read with care what he had to say about football, it seems to me that his opinions carry all the weight of an oyster cracker.

He says that he would like to match the L. S. U. team against Minnesota and Princeton on the same afternoon. Has he ever seen Minnesota or Princeton?

The answer is "No," of course. But likely if he had he wouldn't know any better—until afterwards. A cheer leader, in this instance Senator Long, is always in the position of a fight manager. What he really is saying is

"Go in and fight, kids. They can't hurt us."

And before the senator goes around over-matching Capt. Biff Jones, he'd better have a heart-to-heart talk to Captain Biff. The captain not only knows something about football, he knows a great deal about Huey.

Enough, among other things, to keep Senator Long off the players' bench when L. S. U. is playing. But Biff hadn't put his foot down the next thing he'd know Huey would have been out there running with the ball—once.

JUMBOS WILL RALLY

It seems to be the fashion these days to get football mixed up with politics and governments. Even President Roosevelt has likened himself to a quarterback calling for the best play he has in his repertoire at the moment.

And so far as Tuesday's elections go, it looks as though the quarterback had sent Big Jim (Powerhouse) Farley crashing through center to a record number of touchdowns.

There was something reminiscent of Jim Thorpe, Ted Coy and Eddie Mahan, at their respective bests, in the way the administration fullback was bowling over the opposition as he went smashing over for one touchdown after another.

The New Deal eleven was so destructive that some of the old guards, I mean the old grads, on the other side, claimed when they picked themselves up off the ground that they had been hit by the new illegal flying wedge.

The New Dealers not only won by a lopsided score and tore down the goal posts, they also took the fields with them, so that the other side has no place left to practice for next year's game.

Still, I guess the Republicans will manage to groan some sort of team by next season. They always have.

Al Smith says that nobody ever shot Santa Claus. But you can't keep the guy that killed the goose that laid the golden egg from winging one at him now and then, Mr. Smith.

Speaking of Al, let us take a look at the records.

While Cheer Leader Long is bellowing and ranting about starting a new civil war in which Princeton or Minnesota would fight on the football field for the right to free Long from their oppression, to be L. S. U., there are at least three teams with better records in the South and Southwest.

PRINCETON VS. MINNESOTA

Biff Jones has a real good team at Baton Rouge and one that is playing a long, tough schedule. But the record show that it has been a mild lever. Alabama is unbeaten and untied and so, I believe, is Tulane, although I am not really looking up the records, as promised, but writing from memory.

In any case, we are going to see Tulane here in New York on Saturday against a team fully capable of giving it all the football game it can possibly want.

The team in Andy Kerr's Red Raiders from Hamilton, N. Y. College to you, and win, lose or draw the Southerners will know that they have been footballing before the day is done.

Even though the Green Wave should engulf the Kerr Raiders, its local appearance more or less disqualifies it for any post-season game, but that ought be overlooked, to my way of thinking, does L. S. U.'s two ties—even though it took such fighting teams as Rice and Southern Methodist University to achieve 'em.

So if we are looking for the champions of the South, why not Alabama? The Crimson tide is always powerful. I am sure it would make a good showing against either Princeton or Minnesota.

But if we are looking for a game that will draw the biggest crowd and produce most for charity that's wrong with just playing the northern entry against itself?—Minnesota vs. Princeton?

After all, the football has been over quite a spell now. And after all, that's the ball game

If I told you one other day that there was a movement on foot to ask President Roosevelt to invite Minnesota and Princeton to meet, he would be no more surprised for Harvard man to get even with Princeton

In any case, why not leave Huey and his megaphone down there where we can hear only the echo? Goodness knows that's loud enough.

Canoe Addicts Meet Saturday

The members of the Eastern Division American Canoe Association will meet in the rooms of the Samoset Canoe Club, Inc., Revere avenue, Winthrop, Saturday evening for their first annual winter season get-together and smoker. Several trophy winners will receive their awards.

Each Day Busy One for Lowenstein

Not the least versatile of M. I. T. athletes is Ed Lowenstein, giant of the varsity crew, and holder of the nimble five slide in Bill Haines fast varsity eight.

Lowenstein is an architect of no mean ability. His room is covered with drawings of structures he has designed. He is commodore of the Tech Boat Club, Tech's most active sports club. He is chairman of the dance committee which pans a dance next week to raise funds to further rowing at the Institute.

Yorgey	119
Park War	119	Zorana	119
Xiphid	119	Grenade	119
Grand Prince	114	Rose Star	109

WOOD DARE a cracking field behind Sonne Knight and Bamboula in the feature at Narragansett today. ZORANA is tied here in the all-in race in this same race but that's her first effort. DOUGLAS F would have a royal chance of copping the whole pot in the event of mud.

SOME KNIGHT, BAMBOULA, GENERAL A

SECOND RACE—Purse $1000 claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one-sixteenth miles

Bamboula	118	Trebark	112
Some Knight	118	Gen. Kenna	111
Their	118	Ring Crosby	111
Mile Stoner	107	Bubbly	107
General A.	118

I find it difficult to separate SOME KNIGHT and BAMBOULA in this affair. However, I'm going to tempt fate by stringing along with the former. GENERAL A is right at tops and is accorded better than a fighting chance.

FAKE, JESSIE D M, GEN. FARLEY

THIRD RACE—Purse $1000, claiming, two-year-olds, six furlongs

Teddy Carl	116	Geo. Farley	113
Hardsell	116	Fake	113
Farrell	115	Jessie D M	113

FAKE, scratch for the race horse, appears fully capable of handling this lot. That last effort was over a heavy track and may be tossed into discard. JESSIE D M, a bullet from the barrier, may hang on long enough to save the place from GEN FARLEY.

MORNING MAIL, KOKAS, RIGHT RANK

FOURTH RACE—Purse $1200, the Squantum, two-year-olds, six furlongs

Morning Mail	116	Kokas	116
Chattie Dawn	105	Dekas	114
Morning Dawn	114	Secret Motive	114
Willingend	108

MORNING MAIL is right at home in any sort of going, so will not have track conditions to offer for an excuse. If anything upsets my dope and hands him a lacing it will likely be KOKAS. RIGHT RANK, an old cutie, is about due for a good race

MODERN ACE, SIS AGNES, AYMOND

FIFTH RACE—Purse $1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one-sixteenth miles

Aymond	109	Dunrock	114

George Deaker	109	Alex Kyle	109
Iron Gate	112	Good Jest	112
Dark Ace	109	Risen	109
Modern Ace	112	Sweet Ace	112

MODERN ACE strikes me as the class of this affair. The Alexander colorbearer has been finishing close up in better company. SIS AGNES is much better than her last race would indicate. AYMOND, a speedy but fainthearted trick, may hold on long enough to save the short end.

MY COUNSELLOR, ROCK POINT, INSTIGATOR

SIXTH RACE—Purse $1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one-sixteenth miles

Rock Point	112	Pinafore	112
Dunbar	117	Old Field	112
Sky Haven	112	Lady Marmion	109

Red Prayer	112	Sc. Ki	112
Y Jee	111	Bonnie	111
Vested Power	109	Vested Power	112
Pompoleon	112

VESTED POWER needs only a fast track in order to grace the winner's circle in this number. That victory over Jamison was all that could be desired. POMPOLEON, a victor of only a few days back, figures to offer the contention. CLOUDLET shapes up next best.

SUB RACE

POLLY CEE, BOOCAP, MUSING

Backs Ruining Game, Says 'Pudge'

By Universal Service

New York, Nov. 8.—Football has become strictly a backfield game.

So says Pudge Heffelfinger, who starred for Yale from 1888 to 1891 and is regarded as one of the greatest guards in the history of the game.

Certain minor rules made by committees consisting of too many backfield graduates, has made football an open game that doesn't make much sense, according to Heffelfinger. Said he today:

"What's the sense in a game that uses a forward pass attack a lot, and then lets passers be caught by the opposition?"

Improper training and the overflow of rules has made line play a lost art, Pudge added.

"They don't train players properly nowadays. We trained like prize fighters for football. I haven't seen a work like tackles and guards since I started that play back in '88.

"The rules, but I can still pile up the interference and smash a play better than most of the linesmen of today.

"I just get through and knocked every one down. We could do those things because of the way we trained. That's why we went through those seasons with few or no substitutions, and that's why I'm as fit as I am today.

"Why, the lineman who receives credit today must be an extraordinary fellow with a lot of luck. Hampered by all those rules I don't see how he can expect a man to play good football.

"The lineman has his eyes in the backfield can't see what's going on—while the backs get all the credit because they get all the freedom of play."

Tech Must Elect 4 Sport Captains

Technology sports teams, prepping for the winter schedules which are to be resumed indefinitely with no less than four teams lacking in captains.

Ed Gannon, captain of squash, is ineligible; Paul Daley, captain of the hockey team, will not don the togs this winter because of a broken leg; Red Kennedy, captain-elect of basketball, has transferred to Michigan, and the wrestlers, fearing a hoodoo, will not elect a leader until after the first match.

The boxers partly offset the deficit in leaders as the mittmen named co-captains, Ed Gaughan and Nick Lafkes

Yale, Georgia to Quit

Yale and Georgia, who have been meeting annually on the gridiron since 1923, may call it quits, after Saturday's engagement. Georgia has beaten the Elis four times running.

The French situation has taken a turn for the worse and there is some wondering in financial circles here as to the probable effect on domestic markets. This attitude could easily start a mild wave of liquidation and we are more than content with our position on the sidelines. Perhaps the most important feature of the French upset is whether a disorganized government can continue to raise the smaller members of the gold bloc. It seems extremely doubtful, especially when one remembers that in Holland particularly there is a strong group desirous of devaluation of the guilder.

Notes: Just a few [illegible] ago the best [illegible] of investors was when and [illegible] who [illegible] might merge. Today when and what brokerage houses . . . While the industrials as a group were making a new high we trust you noticed that A. W. Harrison lagged . . . It is still the best single guide that we know of. . . . The better grade rails did their best to get somewhere, but the big bulk of the group refused to budge . . . They seem to be jolted by the talk of "higher rates." Which seem sure to come — but not too distant future.

Some commentators saw the post-election rise as due to fear by some that the New Deal sweep means inflation. Possibly, but we still think that it will be soon enough to talk about inflation after the turn of the year. Then the temper of the new Congress will be known. Also relief appropriations will have been definitely stated and the price on silver will no longer be a matter for conjecture. At the same time, when anyone yells inflationary market, look at the stocks move. If the metals and utilities are hand-in-hand, be skeptical.

Shorts: Our participation barometer has refused to climb and, until it does, we will continue to feel quite sure of ourselves . . . If the industrials again back off from the 96 level, their action will alienate many traders who have been staunch friends of the bull cause . . . So much so that they rode out every previous reaction . . . Therefore such a development will be the best thing that could happen, since it will strengthen the technical position of the list . . . So we caution against over bearishness, even though our personal position is on the sidelines.

October hardware sales continued the uptrend of the previous months. In fact, we learn from Hardware Age that October totals when finally compiled will prove to exceed the preceding months. Highly competitive conditions in some lines are affecting prices and create some uncertainty as to the future. This tendency naturally keeps large buyers in a neutral state that is not conducive to free buying. However, we see no reason for changing our previous ideas concerning the hardware shares and regard them as most promising.

PROFIT-TAKING HOLDS MARKET IN CHECK

New York, Nov. 8.—Persistent profit-taking held the stock market in check today and brought fractional losses into evidence in a few instances.

Trading, however, tapered off on the reaction and total turnover fell under a million shares again.

Today's hesitancy also was due, in part, to the inclination of traders to await news from Washington and also to see how the new French political situation turns out. Now that the Doumergue cabinet has fallen.

RAILS SLUGGISH

United States Steel was a persistent strong spot, rising another half-point to a new high on the present movement, reflecting the comparatively optimistic review by Iron Age. Bethlehem, though, failed to make any further headway.

General Motor and Chrysler held in a narrow range slightly under yesterday's closing levels.

Irregularity was most pronounced in the railroad shares group where the profit taking was heaviest. The carrier shares were dull and sluggish from the outset and showed no disposition to carry through with yesterday's upturn.

Building also fluctuated considerably after early hesitancy due to profit taking with Johns Manville and American Radiator advancing fractionally.

Utilities turned quiet but held around yesterday's closing levels. Oils, chemicals and liquors marked time.

TRADERS HESITANT

While most market commentators were still inclined to interpret the election results as an indication that further inflationary steps probably will be taken by the next Congress, traders appeared to be a trifle hesitant to back up this view with any broad expansion of commitments.

In addition to the domestic situation, the fall of the Doumergue cabinet in France tended to cloud the speculative picture. Just what repercussions would be felt here should the French be forced off the gold standard, along with the other gold bloc countries, is a matter of argument. In some quarters it was thought this might be temporarily bearish for equities, although bullish in the long run because it would bring international monetary stabilization that much nearer.

U. S. MAY PROBE BOSTON CURB

A statement that the Boston Curb Exchange should be investigated and that the new Federal Securities and Exchange Commission had already authorized it, was made today at hearing before an examiner appointed by the U. S. District Court.

The statement was made by Attorney John M. Flynn, representative of the commission, who argued against exemption of curb exchanges from registration with the commission. Hearing on this question was begun today before Thomas J. Lynch, as examiner. He was refused access to the curb records last Tuesday and that members of the exchange "departed suddenly" and refused to cooperate.

He said that yesterday members of the curb refused to talk with him and that one member had refused on advice of counsel. Another, he said, told him he would not talk on the constitutional grounds.

10-13—Prices were narrowly mixed for the most part in the initial hour. Trading was fairly active. Sugars were firm. Rails lagged. Turnover amounted to 200,000 shares.

11-12—Irregular trend continued in the second hour. Trading diminished considerably. Transactions approximated 470,000 shares.

1-2—Rails displayed a slight tendency toward firmness in the fourth hour. Rails continued to lag. Trading was quiet. Sales were 670,000 shares.

Prices held within narrow limits in the final hour. There showed no disposition to rise. Late tone was irregular. Sales were estimated at 800,000 shares.

In order to facilitate the computation of margins under the regulations of the Security Exchange Act, the Boston Evening American now carries the low since July 1, 1933, instead of the low for the year. The Securities Exchange Act provides that until July 1, 1935, the lowest price at which a security has sold since July, 1933, shall be considered as the lowest market price in the preceding 36 months. After July 1, 1935, the Act provides that the lowest price in the preceding 36 months will form the basis for margins computation.

"The Big Knock-Over" - "The Thin Man" Author's New Thrilling Serial - By Dashiell Hammett

Detectives Make Their Way Into Mysterious Cottage After Gun and Knife Play

CHAPTER 15

My hands were in my overcoat pockets—one holding the flashlight, the other my gun.

I pushed the muzzle of the pocketed gun toward the man—pulled the trigger.

The shot ruined seventy-five dollars' worth of overcoat for me. But it took the man away from my neck.

That was lucky. Another man was on my back.

I tried to twist away from him—didn't altogether make it—felt the edge of a knife along my spine.

That wasn't so lucky—but it was better than getting the point.

I butted back at his face—missed—kept twisting and squirming while I brought my hands out of my pockets and clawed at him.

The blade of his knife came flat against my cheek . I caught the hand that held it and let myself go—down backward—him under.

He said: "Uh!"

I rolled over, got hands and knees on the ground, was grazed by a fist, scrambled up.

Fingers dragged at my ankle.

My behavior was ungentlemanly. I kicked the fingers away—found the man's body—kicked it twice—hard.

Jack's voice whispered my name. I couldn't see him in the blackness, nor could I see the man I had shot.

"All right here," I told Jack. "How did you come out?"

"Top-hole. Is that all of it?"

"Don't know, but I'm going to risk a peek at what I've got."

Tilting my flashlight down at the man under my foot, I snapped it on. A thin blond man, his face blood-smeared, his pink-rimmed eyes jerking as he tried to play 'possum in the glare.

FLYING BULLETS

"Come out of it!" I ordered.

A heavy gun went off back in the bush—another, lighter one. The bullets ripped through the foliage.

I switched off the light, bent to the man on the ground, knocked him on the top of the head with my gun.

"Crooch down low," I whispered to Jack.

The smaller gun snapped again, twice. It was ahead, to the left.

I put my mouth to Jack's ear.

"We're going to that damned cottage whether anybody likes it or no. Keep low and don't do any shooting unless you can see what you're shooting at. Go ahead."

Bending as close to the ground as I could, I followed Jack up the path. The position stretched the slash in my back—a scalding pain from between my shoulders almost to my waist. I could feel blood trickling down over my hips—or thought I could.

The going was too dark for stealthiness. Things crackled under our feet, rustled against our shoulders. Our friends in the bush used their guns. Luckily, the sound of twigs breaking and leaves rustling in pitch blackness isn't the best of targets. Bullets zipped here and there, but we did not stop any of them. Neither did we shoot back.

We halted where the end of the bush left the night a weaker gray.

"That's it," Jack said about a square shape ahead.

"On the jump," I grunted and lit out for the dark cottage.

RACE ACROSS CLEARING

Jack's long slim leg kept him easily at my side as we raced across the clearing.

A man-shape oozed from behind the blot of the building and his gun began to blink at us. The shots came so close together that they sounded like one long stuttering bang.

Pulling the youngster with me, I flopped, flat to the ground except where a ragged edged empty tin can held my face up.

From the other side of the building another gun coughed. From a tree-stem to the right, a third.

Jack and I began to burn powder back at them.

A bullet clicked my mouth full of dirt and pebbles. I spit mud and cautioned Jack:

"You're shooting too high. Hold it low and pull easy."

A hump showed in the house's dark profile. I sent shullet at it.

A man's voice yelled: "Ow—ooh!" and then, lower but very bitter, "Oh, damn you—damn you!"

For a warm couple of seconds bullets pattered all around us. Then there was not a sound to spoil the night's quiets.

When the silence had lasted five minutes, I got myself up on hands and knees and began to move forward, Jack following. The ground wasn't made for that sort of work. Ten feet of it was enough. We stood up and walked the rest of the way to the building.

"Wait," I whispered, and leaving Jack at one corner of the building, I circled it, seeing nobody, hearing nothing but the sounds I made.

We tried the front door. It was locked but rickety.

SHACK IS EMPTY

Bumping it open with my shoulder, I went indoors—flashlight and gun in my fists.

The shack was empty.

Nobody — no furnishings — no traces of them in the two bare rooms—nothing but bare wooden walls, bare floor, bare ceiling with one oil-lamp connected to nothing sticking through it.

Jack and I stood in the middle of the floor, looked at the emptiness, and cursed the dump from back door to front for being empty. We hadn't quite finished when feet sounded outside, a white light beamed on the open doorway, and a cracked voice said:

"Hey! You can come out one at a time—kind of easy like!"

"Who are you?" I asked, snapping off the flashlight, moving over close to a side wall.

"A whole goldurned flock of deputy sheriffs," the voice answered.

"Couldn't you push one of 'em in and let us get a look at him?" I asked. "I've been choked and carved and shot at tonight until I haven't got much faith left in anybody's word."

A lanky, knock-kneed man with a thin leathery face appeared in the doorway. He showed me a buzzer, I fished out my credentials, and the other deputies came in. There were three of them in all.

"We were driving down the road bound for a little job near the point when we heard all the shooting," the lanky one explained. "What's up?"

WOODS SEARCHED

I told him.

"This shack's been empty a long while," he said when I had finished. "Anybody could have camped in it easy enough. Think it was that Papadopoulos, huh? He's kind of look around for him and his friends—especial since there's that nice reward money."

We searched the woods and found nobody. The man I had knocked down and the man I had shot were both gone.

Jack and I rode back to Saussalito with the deputies. I hunted up a doctor there and had my back bandaged. He said the cut was long but shallow. Then we returned to San Francisco and separated in the direction of our homes.

And thus ended the day's doings.

Here is something that happened next morning. I didn't see it. I heard nothing about it a little before noon and read about it in the papers that afternoon. I didn't know then that I had any personal interest in it, but later I did—so I'll put it in here where it happened.

At 10 o'clock that morning, into busy Market street, staggered a man who was naked from the top of his battered head to the soles of blood-stained feet. From his bare chest and sides and back, little ribbons of flesh hung down, dripping blood. His left arm was broken in two places. The left side of his bald head was smashed in. An hour later he died in the emergency hospital—without having said a word to anyone, with the same vacant, distant look in his eyes.

The police easily ran back the trail of blood drops. They ended with a red smear in an alley beside a small hotel just off Market street. In the hotel, the police found the room from which the man had jumped, fallen, or been thrown. The bed was soggy with blood. On it were torn and twisted sheets that had been knotted and used ropewise. There was also a towel that had been used as a gag.

SEARCH OF ROOMS

The evidence read that the naked man had been gagged, trussed up and worked on with a knife. The doctors said the ribbons of flesh had been cut loose, not torn or clawed. After the knife-user has gone away, the naked man had worked free of his bonds, and probably crazed by pain, had either jumped or fallen out of the window. The fall had crushed his skull and broken his arm, but he had managed to walk a block and a half in that condition.

The hotel management said the man had been there two days. He was registered as H. F. Barrows, City. He had a black gladstone bag in which, besides clothes, shaving implements and so on, the police found a box of .38 cartridges, a black handkerchief with eyeholes cut in it, four skeleton keys, a small jimmy, and a quantity of morphine, with a needle and the rest of the kit. Elsewhere in the room they found the rest of his clothes, a .38 revolver and two quarts of liquor. They didn't find a cent.

A lanky, knock-kneed man with a thin leathery face appeared in the doorway. He showed me a buzzer and came in with three other deputies . . . "We heard all the shootin'," he said.

LEW LEAVENS, EDITOR, DIES

By Universal Service

Rhinebeck, N. Y., Nov. 8—Lew Leavens, 49, well known for many years as a newspaperman, attached to Hearst and other newspapers throughout the country, died at a sanitarium here yesterday after a long illness.

Mr. Leavens was born of a well known family in Brattleboro, Vt. He served in various editorial capacities on newspapers in Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis and Cleveland. About ten years ago he was managing editor of the Rochester Journal. Later he was connected with the Syracuse Telegram and the New York American.

In 1926 he became assistant editor of the Chicago Herald Examiner and later was assistant editor of the American Weekly Magazine of the Hearst newspapers.

About a year ago Mr. Leavens was stricken with the illness that culminated in his death. He is survived by a widow, who was at his bedside throughout his illness, as well as by his mother and brother who live in Kansas City.

U. S. Postal Man to Join Byrd

By Universal Service

Washington, Nov. 8—The Post Office Department's ambassador of Little America has departed on the first leg of his 18,000 mile journey to the polar region.

Equipped with cancelling machines, Charles F. Anderson, mail expert, is on his way to San Francisco. There he will sail Tuesday for New Zealand. At Dunedin he will meet the Bear of Oakland Byrd expedition flagship, for the last 1700-mile lap of his trip.

With him went 40,000 cover stamp collectors had sent to Washington since the expedition departed last fall.

Arriving at Little America, Anderson will begin the task of cleaning some 81,000 covers, in addition to those which are received at the Washington post office between now and December 1.

Fun! Facts! "Faces!"

You, too, can have lots of fun each day solving the Boston Evening American's "About Faces" series, featuring leading movie stars as they appear at your favorite theaters.

Today's Hollywood celebrities may be seen on the screens of two of Boston's most popular twin theaters, the Paramount and Fenway Theaters, where they offer, "The St. Louis Kid," and "Elinor Norton." Each of today's "About Faces" characters plays a leading role in the above mentioned pictures. Visit the Paramount and Fenway Theaters and your clues will solve themselves.

All you have to do, to share in the weekly $25 in cash awards as offered by the Boston Evening American, is to correctly identify today's Hollywood stars. Beneath each drawing of the star you will find a block of squares which equal the number of letters in the name of this favorite Hollywood celebrity. Correctly fill in these squares, using the letter as a clue, and mail your entire week's solutions to: The About Faces Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. Prizes are: First prize; $5.00; second prize; $3.00; third prize; $2.00; and fifteen cash prizes of a brand new one dollar bill each.

ENTER NOW! Today's is the fourth in this week's "About Faces" series! You still have a chance to win one of these cash awards! Begin NOW!

TRADE PARLEY FOR DRUGGISTS

By Universal Service

Washington, Nov. 8—A trade practice conference for the wholesale drug industry will be held December 6 at Chicago, the federal trade commission announced today.

The National Wholesale Druggists Association at its recent annual convention requested such a conference.

The commission said:

"The purpose of the conference is to eliminate certain unfair methods of competition and trade abuses of which there has been complaint in the industry, including such practices as secret rebates, misbranding, price discrimination, false invoicing, substitution of prices without authority and other unfair practices."

Maritime Adds 5 Members

Five new members were added today to the Maritime Association, Boston Chamber of Commerce. They are Frank C. Turner, passenger manager, Canadian National Steamships; John B. Waterman, Waterman Steamship Company Mobile, Alabama; H. Ainsley Higman, resident manager for New England of the French Line; Joseph E. Doherty, yacht broker, and Colonial Beacon Oil Company.

own throats in not giving proportionate representation in their councils and on their tickets to the great foreign language groups here in Massachusetts.

I have heard it said that since the women received the vote and the Women's Republican Club became a power in the party, the tendency to operate along social lines and to raise the snobbish barrier of race and caste has been much more marked than it used to be in the comparatively simple and democratic days of Crane and McCall and Coolidge.

Judge Robert Grant's novel "The Dark Horse," with its picture of the inner workings of the Women's Republican Club throws some light on that idea.

There is no reason why the Republican party in Massachusetts with its wealth, prestige and its long headstart should not have solidified this state in its image. Just as in Republican Pennsylvania.

Tuesday last showed Pennsylvania cracking, but it is by no means in the parious condition of the party here.

All you can say is that Republican psychology was stupid. In politics as in other walks of life, that means death. The organism that does not come up to the mark is replaced by the organism that does. Or in the more idealistic words of Tennyson—

"The old order changes, giving place to new,
And God fulfills himself in many ways,
Lest one good custom should corrupt the world."

Chemist Probes Death of Boy

St. Johnsbury, Vt. Nov. 8—State pathologist Dr. C. F. Whitney, of Burlington, today was injecting the vital organs of Ernest Turgeon, 12, of West Burke, to chemical tests.

The boy died apparently from a stomach ailment but attending physicians refused to sign a death certificate. An autopsy was performed later as Sheriff Frederick A. Flint and States Attorney Harry R. Waterman investigated the case.

Cross Stitch Accessories

CROSS STITCH FOOTSTOOL OR PILLOW

PATTERN 873

Cross stitch, one of the easiest and most decorative forms of needlework, ranks as a great favorite today. Quickly done, colorful, durable, there is every reason for the needlewoman to be partial to it. This design—A horn of plenty filled with flowers in a great profusion of color—is equally lovely on footstool or pillow. And if you like, it can be used to decorate a chair, too. You can use the center motif alone or just the corners instead of the whole design—they look very well separated that way. The color key shows you exactly where to put each color to get the most effective shading and color arrangement. So enhance your home or delight some friend by embroidering this for her for Christmas.

Pattern 873 comes to you with a transfer pattern of a 9 x design 9½ x 13½ inches; a color key; material requirements; and directions for making a pillow or covering a footstool.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to Boston Evening American Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

41 Medical

X-RAY
Examination, consultation and trial treatment absolutely free to all who call before Nov. 10th. The wonderful power of the X-ray and mercury quartz light treatment of all nervous disorders in disease of every description. No matter what your disease may be remember Dahal J. Walsh, M. D., fully qualified to cure you.

INTESTINAL TROUBLE
Mrs. Edward Melanson, 251 Upland Rd., Cambridge, Mass., says: "I had suffered from intestinal trouble, Rheumatism and Arthritis for 10 years. I was hysterical, nervous and despondent. The pain in my head was terrible. I could not sleep. I had been treated by a number of doctors but they did not help me. I read of Dr. Walsh, and like a drowning person grasped at a straw. I had Dr. Walsh treat me. His treatment did me wonders and I am delighted that this opportunity is offered me that I may tell others who suffer as I did where they can go for relief."

Signed Mrs. Edward Melanson.

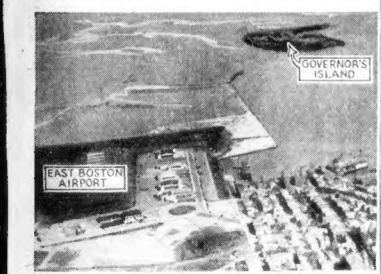
Let's Get Ready for Defense in the Air

A REAL step toward national preparedness will be taken if the plan for a $10,000,000 air base in Boston harbor is adopted by the Federal Aviation Commission.

The plan is sponsored by Congressman Mark Wilcox, Democrat, of Florida as part of a program to cover important strategic points.

The proposed Boston base would have a regular complement of the 100 to 150 military planes of suitable type.

Portland, Me., is also included on the program Congressman Wilcox suggests.



GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, PROPOSED BOSTON AIR BASE SITE

The leveling of Governor's Island is favored to provide land for the Boston base.

This would be a comparatively easy task, like other islands in Boston Harbor, Governor's is said by geologists to have been raised by glacial deposits about 25,000 years ago.

Without large masses of rock to prevent leveling, Governor's Island could very quickly be fitted for an airplane base.

UNDOUBTEDLY the England-to-Australia flight, showing how easily oceans can be spanned by planes, has made all thinking Americans aware of the new menace raised by perfection of what was originally an American invention.

We know now how easily an enemy could attack our major centers of population.

It behooves us to make ready to repulse them, as SOME DAY they will surely come UNLESS we are PREPARED.

Let Congress at the January session take heed.

Our national defense is one of the most important problems with which it can deal.

Let's enter no parley with foreign nations, but build our air bases and our navies of the air with all possible speed.

"Make Good Cheer"

"At Christmas . . . make good cheer,
For Christmas comes but once a year."

So wrote Thomas Tusser, poet of the 16th century. Hundreds of years have rolled by, but still at Christmas time we "make good cheer."

Not for ourselves alone do we make Christmas Day a most happy festival.

It is then that we think of the needy, of those less fortunate than ourselves. From the bounty allowed us we give to them.

We must not wait until Christmas Day to do this, except in cases close to our doors.

Sit down, after securing checkbook and fountain pen, and write a check for your contribution to the Boston American's long-established Christmas Basket Fund.

Address it to the Boston American Christmas Basket Fund, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Whatever you feel able to contribute will go, to the last penny, to deserving charity. And will gladden some needy home on Christmas Day.

Heroes of the Deep

Captain John H. Diehl of the Steamship St. Louis, hero of the Morro Castle disaster, is to be tendered a reception by Boston Lodge of Elks at 6:30 p. m. next Sunday.

Despite the decline of shipping in recent years, the sea has many heroes.

Two of them—great American merchant marine captains—may soon leave the service of the sea.

Captain George Fried, hero of many rescues, is slated to become Supervising Inspector of the New York division of the Bureau of Navigation and Steamboat Inspection. There he will be in a position to AVERT future disasters.

Captain Albert R. ("Rescue") Randall is to be superintendent of Sailors Snug Harbor, Staten Island, continuing his care for the men whose affections he has won down through the years.

Every retirement of a notable sea captain drives home the importance of the suggestion that Uncle Sam establish a Merchant Marine Academy to train officers for American ships.

The Skidding Menace

A Worcester motor vehicle inspector crashed to death when the machine in which he was riding skidded into a stone abutment of a railroad underpass at West Boylston this week.

The accident teaches us that the building of underpasses to do away with grade crossings will not make our highways anything like 100 per cent safe, though it helps.

Accidents at underpasses are too numerous. Particularly when cars try to pass in them!

The public has been frequently warned of late against the skidding menace.

This is increased by the autumnal combination of wet roads and fallen leaves.

Highway safety writers issue good advice from time to time. Better see that YOU follow it!

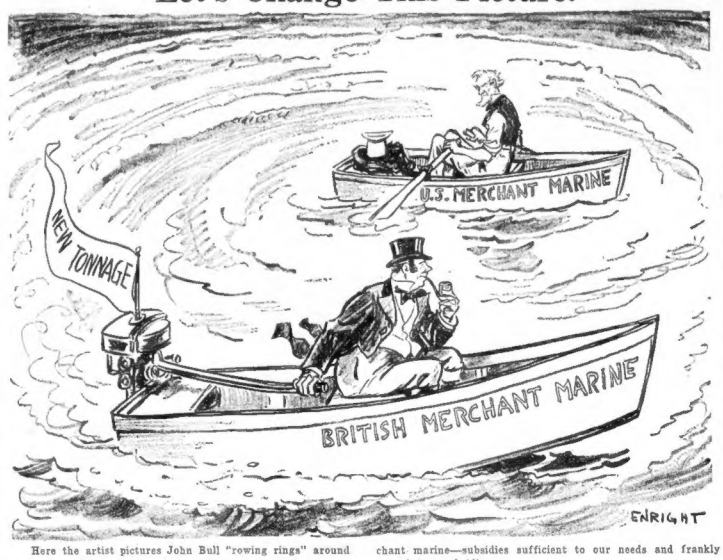
Let's Change This Picture!



Here the artist pictures John Bull "rowing rings" around Uncle Sam. Patriotic Americans will agree that this picture must be changed.

The Department of Commerce has done well in informing the country as to the volume of shipbuilding going on throughout the world.

The Post Office Department is investigating the ocean mail contracts let by former Administrations and is expected to "revise" them.

President Roosevelt has wisely decided that Federal aid to the merchant marine shall not cease, but that, instead of "subsidies" disguised as "mail contracts," we shall have mail contracts as advisable, and ALSO direct subsidies to the merchant marine—subsidies sufficient to our needs and frankly extended as subsidies.

Under this straightforward policy there should be no "scuttling" of the merchant marine and no abuses of subsidies.

And the Department of Commerce shows exactly why.

For of the total tonnage now being constructed Great Britain is building 46.1 per cent, other countries 52.2 per cent and this country only 1.7 per cent.

That infinitesimal portion will soon render us subject to foreign powers on the high seas—vassals to their restrictions in commerce and victims of their caprice or enmity in event of war.

Our merchant marine must be ADEQUATELY developed and maintained with ADEQUATE Federal aid.

Want to Feel Like "Ten Million?" Here's Your Chance

This is going to be a review about Mark Hellinger's new book, "THE TEN MILLION." Mark's a syndicate columnist. Every day he tells a yarn about people — all kinds of people. They are swell yarns, Farrar and Rinehart have bound 61 of Mark's yarns into a book that costs $2.50. Two-fifty's a lot of money these days. And, of course, you shouldn't cut down on your milk and spinach for any writer on earth—unless it might be ME. But, barring that, here's the brat use you can possibly make of that much cash. Which I'm going to tell the Big Boy with thanks.

Elsie Robinson

Dear Mark—

You'd no business doing it. Not, at any rate, until we were introduced. Making me cry—

Now crying may be becoming to you. You're only 31—and perhaps a lil' mulberry mottling merely adds to your childish appeal. But I'm 51. Not a lovely, wan 51, but one of those big, buxom, blousy babies that emoting makes look like a boiled dinner. But never mind — I'll forgive my zoomed beauty, youngster, for the sake of what you did to my heart.

ABOUT MY HEART

Queer thing about my heart. Lately it has been getting that out-of-circulation feeling that's bothering us all. And I certainly didn't think YOU were going to do anything about it, kid, when I picked up your bunch of yarns.

But before I'd read a dozen pages, there I was crying. Over what? Just a dozen words about a homely hurt woman praying for love.

Have I known that woman? By the thousands! Maybe—but this is just between us—maybe I've been her! Then shuddering. Shuddering because I, too, knew someone who waited for death in the night. Crying—shuddering—laughing—

And suddenly forgetting both snivels and grins. For something was happening! Deep down . . . inside . . . something was starting. I wasn't alone any more! I wasn't lost in my own darkness, rasslin' with my own little grouch. I was back with the "ten millions"—I was one of them again!

BROADWAY'S GLITTER

How is it you put it, Mark, as you write of them—of that domain where "lovers meet, husbands cheat, and wives bleat . . . the domains of lips, slips, gyps, pipe, lips and hips . . . prize fleas, knock knees, book shops, hock shops, elbow benders, gossip vendors—"

They're your world, lad, yours and mine. And you tell of them in Broadway patter with a Broadway sneer.

But all the time you're handing out the hard stuff and the hot stuff, you're giving us the HEART stuff too—the gentleness and decency, the pity and beauty, the courage and kindness that binds us all together even when the bright lights go dark.

Just giving us Broadway's glitter—says YOU. But you've done a bigger job than that.

You've brought us together again —made us feel that we're "all of a piece"—and thank Go" that we are!

AND THAT, AS I SEE IT, IS ABOUT THE BEST TURN ONE HUMAN CAN DO FOR HIS TRIBE IN THESE MAD, MUDDLED DAYS.

So it's jake about the red nose, sen. It was worth it all—to find the gang again. And here's hoping you do the same by the rest of them!

Elsie.

Their New Arrival -:- By Winifred Black

Well, here he is at last—the little fellow they've all been waiting for so long.

Seven pounds exactly, as round as a butter ball, and is his hair going to be blonde or red or just auburn?

His eyes—they're black or very, very dark blue, and they sparkle as if they had been polished.

No, he doesn't cry so very much — only once in a while he raises a kind of "yoo-hoo" just to let every one know he's there safe and sound and wants a little attention.

Winifred Black

They were just the least little bit worried about this young man's arrival. Times have been rather hard all through the country, as perhaps a few of you may have suspected.

The young man's dad had lost his job through no fault of his own, and there seemed to be rather a cloudy sky ahead.

Did they go torching around with the blues? They did not.

THE FAMILY RALLIES

They started in to get things ready and all the brothers and sisters joined in and big sister came down from the city and told them how she was going to be Johnny-on-the-spot, or Jenny-on-the-spot right straight along, rain or shine.

And Billie, the little brother—he was strong for the new little nephew right from the minute he first heard about it.

Little brother? Well, you ought to see him. He's young to be sure, just tipping the turn of twenty-one, but he's close to six feet tall, I'd have you know, and he's beginning to broaden out across the shoulders.

The little ranch where he and his parents live has been like most ranches, small and large, this last year or so—not paying so very well.

Little brother found a job in the village, not such a big job, but a job anyhow with steady money, and is he proud of it.

And just when the family had everything planned, brother-in-law got a new job, not so very fine when he started at it, but he worked early and late and he made a little invention of his own, and the company was delighted to get it, and the night the new little fellow arrived—brother-in-law got home at 10 o'clock just in time to get the family to the hospital and at half past five in the morning the little fellow arrived safe and sound, and brother-in-law washed his face and hands and was right back on his job.

BIT OF GOOD LUCK

Pretty strenuous, wasn't it—but, pshaw, they don't think of it that way, not this family. They just thought it was luck and good luck, but I think the best luck that same little fellow will ever have in his life, is the luck he had being born into that particular family.

They don't spend time and energy moaning over conditions, they just get in and work and laugh and cry and have a good time—just living and all at once everything is all right.

And the best of it is, this country is full of just such families as that, sturdy, self-respecting, honest, energetic, ambitious, warm-hearted, warm-blooded, clear-minded Americans.

And that's why nobody and nothing will ever get America really down—to stay.

IMPERFECTIONS

Sometimes I bring home friends to dine
When she is not prepared.
A very common fault of mine
As she has oft declared.
And then again when she has planned
My favorite dish for me,
For reasons she can't understand
I don't come home for tea.

I leave the dresser drawers pulled out
A careless man am I.
I toss discarded clothes about,
Which causes her to sigh.
I call to her to find my things,
Which I should plainly see,
A needless task, which often brings
Her scolding up to me.

As hand and foot she waits on me
She sadly shakes her head.
Why must I so indifferent be
To everything she's said.
Why can't I look upon the shelf!
Does not the thought occur
That I should wait upon myself
Without disturbing her?

"Yet were I perfect," I reply,
"Another man I'd be
And you might soon begin to sigh
To know the old-time me.
Should I become the best of men
As soon as I was gone
You'd want the husband back again
Who needed waiting on."

Stars and Stripes

In his marvelous flight across the Pacific, Kingsford-Smith has blazed the path of civilization for the Fiji Islander as brilliantly as P. T. Barnum did for the wild man from Borneo.

Postmaster General Farley told the New York Friars he hoped they liked his postage stamps. The Friars seemed to think he should make them bigger and better. So they'd go farther.

Mary Pickford says she and "Doug" are just good friends. If they'll stay that way they ought to be able to get along nicely together.

The "nine o'clock dinner dance" is the latest society innovation. After it comes the supper dance, and then we have breakfast and go to bed. Everybody is too tired to dance after breakfast.

Human Side of the News
Oil Means Empire

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

A great deal of oil diplomacy stays underground. Once in a while it seeps up to the surface, as today, in the issue of Japan's oil monopoly in Manchukuo.

Great Britain and the United States team up in defense of the "open door" policy, stemming from the days of John Hay. The Netherlands join in. America, Britain and Holland are the great oil sovereignties of the world.

We learn that this intensifying argument has been going on off-stage for many months. It is now out in the glare of the footlights. Plot and characters are the same. Again it is the world struggle for raw materials and markets—the central plot of the World War, according to many historians.

ABOUT LIQUID GOLD

At a Kansas cross-roads or deep in the heart of an African jungle are the rival insignia of competing companies and, in the political incidence of all world enterprise, of competing nations.

All the gold dust of California's roaring forty-niners, with its lingering romantic epilogue, is as the widow's pence weighed against this flow of liquid gold and its back-wash on human destiny.

"He who has oil has empire," said the sagacious French, even before the rest of the world knew just what to do with this viscous stream which had been lured from the earth, down in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania.

That was just seventy-five years ago and here one recalls again that recent remark of Henry Ford's about some backyard investor probably upsetting all the artifice, all the desperate devices of the politicians.

If Mr. Ford had made this remark in March, 1859, he would have been talking about a rather dreamy young man, who let his thoughts graze here and there in the open range of an inquiring mind. His allusion also would have touched on the chance combination of a flurry of rain in downtown New York, and a certain drug store awning being down, instead of up.

OUT OF DARTMOUTH

George H. Bissell was the young man, not long out of Dartmouth. There, Professor Crosby had displayed bottles of a brownish yellow liquid, skimmed from pools in Pennsylvania, endowed by the Indians with mystic properties, signalized in their tribal ceremonies, as somehow potent in the affairs of men.

The professor had carried on certain experiments touching on its possibly curative properties. Young Mr. Bissell was impressed. He was endowed with the priceless human attribute—curiosity, always bulking large in the human side of the news.

That dash of rain in lower Broadway caught him without an umbrella or raincoat. He stopped under the drug store awning. There in the window was a bottle of yellow liquid, frantically bally-hooed as a cure for all the ills of man or beast.

"Taken from the first underground," said the placard.

Young Bissell knew that this was untrue. He knew the quacks who were peddling the stuff as a cure-all soaked it up in blankets, on the surface of pools, or in the trickings from salt mines.

But the "hunch" which hit him had all the impact of Lou Gehrig's bat. He had no money, or powerful friends, but he did know a shrewd Yankee who could understand a hunch. He looked up his old friend E. L. Drake, a conductor on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. Drake always knew how to cobble up something that would work.

They went down to Titusville, Pa., and took in with them "Uncle Billy" Smith, another shrewd old timer.

OIL IS DISCOVERED

They made a crude caisson and sunk a pipe. On August 29, 1859, they had plugged down 69 feet, six inches. They were nearly at the end of their resources. But on this day a steady stream of oil came pouring through the pipe—40 barrels a day. Mobs came swarming from all the countryside, from the big towns, farms, factories and cities. There was a rabble of ragged adventurers and there were also shrewd bankers and investors, eager to take a look at this curious stuff, somehow sensing its importance, without any clear understanding of its worth.

Samuel M. Kier of Pittsburgh built a crude refinery. Allegheny county was bristling with derricks. Down from the mountains came bewhiskered circuit-riding preachers, to harrangue the crowds and thunder against the filching "from the earth that which God had put away from the eyes of men.

Jeremy Twigg, strange old white-bearded Isaiah — no one knew whence he came or where he went—called down gloom and doom on all who touched oil. He had seen a vision. In his apocalyptic thunders he visioned "war and rumors of war," all the demons of Revelations loosed in the wake of this sluggish yellow flow.

WARNINGS SOUNDED

Even in certain churches in the great cities, clergy with Oxonian accents intoned disaster for mankind unless he foreswore this invasion of the deeps under the earth. This alarm on the part of religious men has remained one of the most puzzling phenomena of its kind in history.

There seemed nothing rational about it. No one knew then what oil might be good for. Nor could foresee its place in world affairs. No Sumner or Frazier ever has sought to explain this strange reaction.

Clock swiftly 75 years—just an instant in great human trends. Here's that snub-nosed train hurtling across the continent with a fuel cost of just $50. That's the Diesel engine, and they're readying it for the air, too. Modern technology has based civilization on the command of energies. That train used the energy equivalent of 7200 men and it paid them a trifle over one cent apiece.

Navy talk is oil talk and survival talk is, too. Diplomats know this, and that is why Washington has been on the job the last few months, although behind the scenes. The United States leads in the annual production of oil, bringing up about one-tenth of the world supply. We once ran neck and neck with Russia in potential oil resources, but the future supply seems to lie mainly in Venezuela, Colombia, Trinidad, Peru, Argentina, Persia, Iraq and Russia.

The United States controls 100 per cent of the Colombian supply; 81 per cent of the Persian; 95 per cent of its own oil, the rest being held by foreign capital; 71 per cent of Mexico; 59 per cent of Canada, and 40 per cent of Venezuela.

The Royal Dutch Shell launched a terrific battle against the Standard Oil in 1928, augured by the latter's purchase of Russian oil for sale in India. Since the war, England, through its Anglo-Persian and other interests has moved in aggressively into the world drive for oil and markets.

The battle goes on ceaselessly, with new alignments and new factors, shuttling bewilderingly through the fabric of world affairs. It was always a new how to cobble up something that would work.

Stop Morning Grouch

The nation in good times may have needed more than anything else a good nickel cigar.

But in bad times, according to Professor McCollum of Johns Hopkins, who knows his biochemicals, it needs a good nickel's worth of magnesium.

The morning grouch, the good professor has discovered, usually comes from lack of this chemical. Rats turn red when they haven't got it and men see red.

Harried wives should slip a little of it into their husbands' morning coffee, perhaps. And then see what happens.

Gold Output Is Up

American Bureau of Metal Statistics announces that the output of gold for September, latest month for which statistics have been completed, set a new record high.

No figures are available to show the amount of gold production from old chests, bureau drawers, etc.

But we would be willing to wager a small sum that gold production in this line is also hovering around new highs.

Nearly every old American home has its "gold digger" of the post-gold standard type. Uncle Sam likes it, so we suggest continued energy be put into the odd quest.

No Undue Haste

No undue haste is being shown at Washington in hearing the protests of Massachusetts, the City of Boston and the Boston Port Authority against the unjust practice of luring steamship business to New York by providing free storage.

Because of various reels of red tape to be unwound, hearings before the Shipping Board Bureau will not be possible until 1935 comes in.

Of the outcome there should be no doubt.

Boston is entitled to a fair deal. It will have it only when port practices that discriminate against us are scrapped.
